MONTEREY PENINSULA Water Management District counsel David Laredo called the news an earthquake measuring "8.0 on the Richter scale."

Seaside City Manager Tim Brown characterized the state's order, which could affect development plans on Monterey Peninsula towns, as being "like a bomb."

MPWMD board Chairwoman Fran Farina said the state has put the peninsula in a hole that will take a long, long time to dig out of.

Analogies were abundant last Friday after the draft decision was received from the State Water Resources Control Board, which ruled on the eight-year-old water rights dispute concerning the Carmel River.

There was gravity in the message: Most of the peninsula's water supply is underground river flow, not independent ground water, as Cal-Am had argued.

Moreover, as the state board has put the peninsula's water authority under its ultimate control, the

IF 14-YEAR-OLD Mike Piccinini had not acted bravely — and exactly when he did — the local surf might well have claimed a father and young daughter as water-logged victims.

For her part, Mike's mother — Carmel resident Pamela Piccinini — said the tall and athletic lad had not gone out on his boogie board "for about two years" before this week's life-saving adventure. "It must have been some instinct — something that Mike felt. Joey felt it, too."

For his part, Mike's 11-year-old brother — the aforementioned Joey — could smile over the fact that he, too, gave his all in the critical situation. "The boys told me that they raced to see who could reach the girl first," their mother said. "It just so happens that Mike was the one who made it all the way."

For his part, 90-pound Andrew Dignan, 11, of Modesto — a close friend visiting the Piccininis — tried hard as the emergency called. "I jumped in with Joey. Waves knocked me back onto the sand."

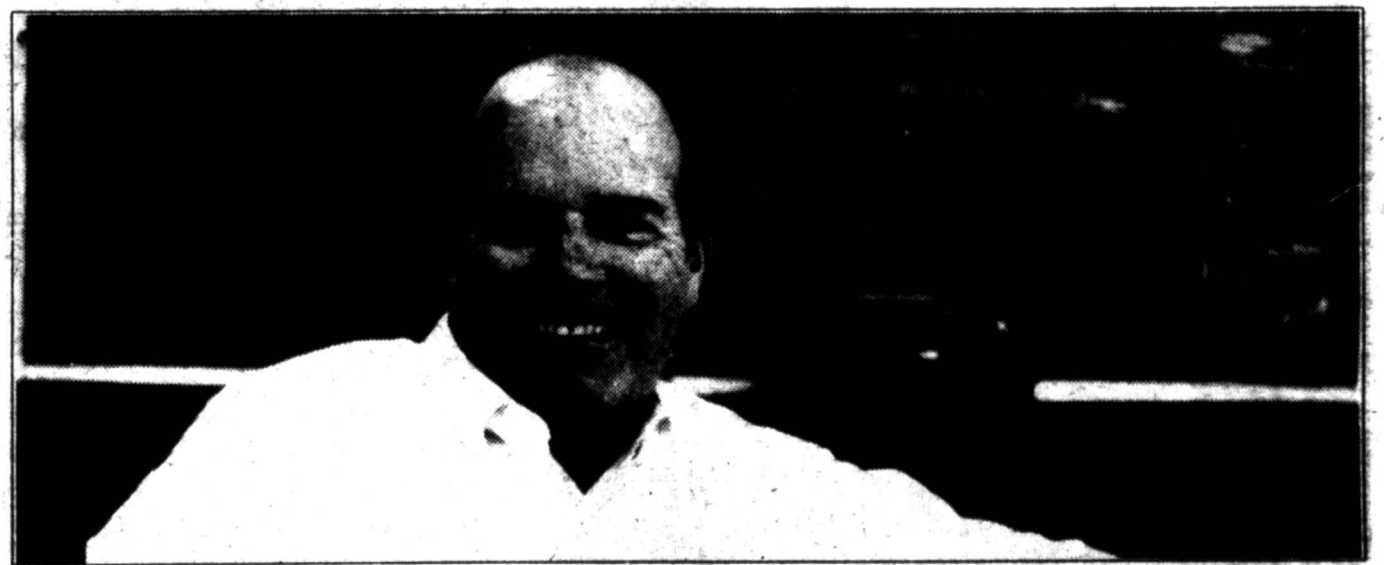

And for his part, Michael Piccinini

Keeping the staff, administrators and community focused on educational priorities has been the biggest challenge faced by Vance Baldwin, who is retiring Friday.

Q&A: Baldwin bids adieu

Retiring CUSD superintendent reflects on career

THE MAN'S characteristic reserve belies his intense goal-oriented nature. His colleagues think of him as a patient arbitrator of school policy and a rare person who doesn't care about kudos for getting the job done and getting it done right.

Carmel Unified School District Superintendent Vance Baldwin is genuine, honest and dependable — he will be missed, they say.

Last December, Baldwin announced his plans to retire at the end of the school year. Friday is his last official day with the district. He was assistant superintendent for six years and superintendent for the past four.

Earlier this week, he shared some thoughts about education with Pine Cone staff reporter Susan Beck.

Her poetry

(Editor's Note: Rosemary Montgomery, Carmel Unified School District's assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction, plans to retire June 30. See story this edition. We thank Barbara Beck of CUSD Child Development Center for pointing out that the retiree wrote poetry which ran each month in the district newsletter. We here offer just one of the Montgomery compositions.)

TEACHER

More important than books and equipment and football games is you, Teacher.

*You listen to what I say,
You value my ideas,
You challenge my mind,
You treat me with respect,
You care.*

*You find joy in your work,
You give freely of your time,
You give and demand excellence,
You believe I can succeed,
You inspire.*

*Many years from now
when I think about school,
I'll remember you, Teacher.*

CUSD's Montgomery retires

Assistant superintendent's skills inspired trust at all levels

By JOHN DETRO

THE PARADOX hit two ways:

■ Though others talked about her at length and most lovingly, Rosemary Montgomery — Carmel Unified School District (CUSD) assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction — chose to say nothing about her retirement or 35-year career in public education.

■ The newsworthy lady's dignity demanded that her request on the reason for departing — no details, please — be honored here.

Dated May 22, Montgomery's letter of resignation expressed sadness over leaving, but added that her illness demanded time and attention. Official retirement date — June 30.

"Rosemary has been battling this thing for a year and a half, or longer," CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin said. "All we can do is wish her very well."

Montgomery and her husband, John, a Monterey photographer, were with out-of-town friends at press time.

Marianne Carmona, the retiree's secretary at CUSD for the past three years, said Montgomery previously put in long service at the Tahoe-Truckee Unified District as a principal. She was known to have taught in both Santa Clara and Aptos.

Montgomery's 11-year CUSD history includes the first three as principal at Carmel River Elementary School. Then she became curriculum director and, finally, assistant superintendent.

Leadership

"Obviously," Baldwin said, "Rosemary's retirement represents a big loss to the school district and to me personally. I counted on her to take leadership in the areas of curriculum and instruction.

With her on staff, I didn't worry. The complex job was in good hands."

And what made him the proudest when he looked back over her CUSD stay? "She made so many significant contributions. Rosemary was a people person who had a great deal of credibility with both staff and parents.

"She facilitated the mentor teacher program (wherein key instructors help other teachers develop approaches). And Rosemary played a key role in advancing our math, social science, reading and science programs."

Others close to Montgomery did not stifle their feelings about her.

"What a wonderful woman," Carmona said. "I've been a secretary for 30 years, and she's unlike anyone I've ever been employed by. Rosemary always said people worked with her — not for her."

And from Barbara Beck, coordinator of CUSD's child development program:

"Rosemary modeled for all of us the very things we educators strive to help children learn. She had the special talent and skills to help us communicate with one another, to help us listen, to believe we could create solutions to problems.

"She spoke to us in her wonderful 'Rosemary' language, the language of humor, of simplicity and straight-forwardness that everyone could understand. She brought perspective and laughter to every committee she chaired — every meeting she attended.

"Carmel Child Development Center and all the child development programs owe a special debt to Rosemary.

"She was the administrator who led us through our early years, who believed in the importance of early childhood education, who helped us feel valued in our own district.

"She is the best teacher I ever had. . . ."

Project St. Bernard raises $1,320

A TOTAL of $1,320 was raised by the Carmel Host Lions and Project St. Bernard on Friday and Saturday, June 16 and June 17.

Project St. Bernard is a citywide group that connects residents in need with social service resources.

The two groups stood on Carmel street corners, discussed the program and asked for donations. The sum was more than anticipated, according to Project Coordinator Becky Hanna.

The money will be used for the group's telephone answering service and for training sessions.

July 6: Mid-life workshop set in PG

THE YWCA of the Monterey Peninsula will present the workshop "Mid-Life is Worth Living," from 6:30 to 8 p.m. beginning Thursday, July 6 and continuing at the same time for the next seven weeks at 510 Lighthouse Ave., Suite 6 in Pacific Grove.

Catheline Sheen, a clinical psychologist, will lead the workshop.

The issues to be discussed include: physical aging, sexuality, menopause, giving and receiving love, healing pain and disappointment and how to become a wiser woman.

Cost is $15 per session. More information: 649-0834.

July 6: Rancho San Carlos EIR eyed

THE SIERRA Club, Ventana chapter and the Carmel Valley Environmental Defense Foundation will hold a workshop and informational meeting to discuss the Draft Environmental Impact Report on the Santa Lucia Preserve development project at 7 p.m., Thursday, July 6 at The Barnyard Community Room in Carmel.

The workshop will be conducted by members of the Rancho San Carlos Sub-Committee, which will focus on a proposal to develop 350 homes, a 150-room hotel, golf course, sports center and commercial village at the 20,000-acre Rancho San Carlos in Carmel Valley.

Further information: 659-0402

July 8: Organic farming session set

THE RANCHO San Carlos Education Foundation will sponsor a free half-day session on organic farming and gardening Saturday, July 8 at the Nature's Classroom, Rancho San Carlos Road and Valley Greens Drive.

Drew Goodman, owner of Earthbound Farms, will conduct a tour of their farm fields and discuss the challenges of growing organic produce. Participants will also visit Earthbound Farms' produce stand and create an organic lunch with recipes from the Rancho San Carlos kitchen.

Registration and information: 626-8200.

July 29: Cancer Society makes plea

THE AMERICAN Cancer Society Discovery Shop in Pacific Grove needs cookbooks and kitchen items for its 10th annual Cookbook and Kitchen Sale to be held Saturday, July 29.

All donations are tax deductible. More information: 372-0866.

Babb honored by Masonic Lodge

CLYDE BABB of Carmel recently received the prestigious Masonic Grand Lodge Golden Veteran award for 50 years in Masonry.

The presentation was made by Herschel Amos, inspector for the 179th district of California, at a recent dinner in the Carmel Masonic Temple.

Babb received his 50 year pin in the San Francisco Typographical Union in Burlingame in June. Mr. and Mrs. Babb observed their 62nd wedding anniversary in May.

Sizzling temperatures sent locals and visitors alike to the Carmel Beach last Saturday, Sunday and Monday. The balmy weekend also was a boon on the local hospitality front as tourism was up heading into the July 4 weekend.

Inns enjoy bustling business, but low rates cited as reason

By PAUL WOLF

MOTEL OCCUPANCY in Carmel is up, but observers of the local economy should not view this news through rose-colored glasses: Innkeepers have kept room rates down.

"There has been a considerable amount of (negotiating rates)," said Toni Jepson, executive director of the Carmel Business Association (CBA). "Rates definitely are lower than they have been."

Throughout the Monterey Peninsula, it has not been unusual to see signs touting "off-season rates" in mid June. A case in point is the El Adobe Inn on Munras Avenue in Monterey.

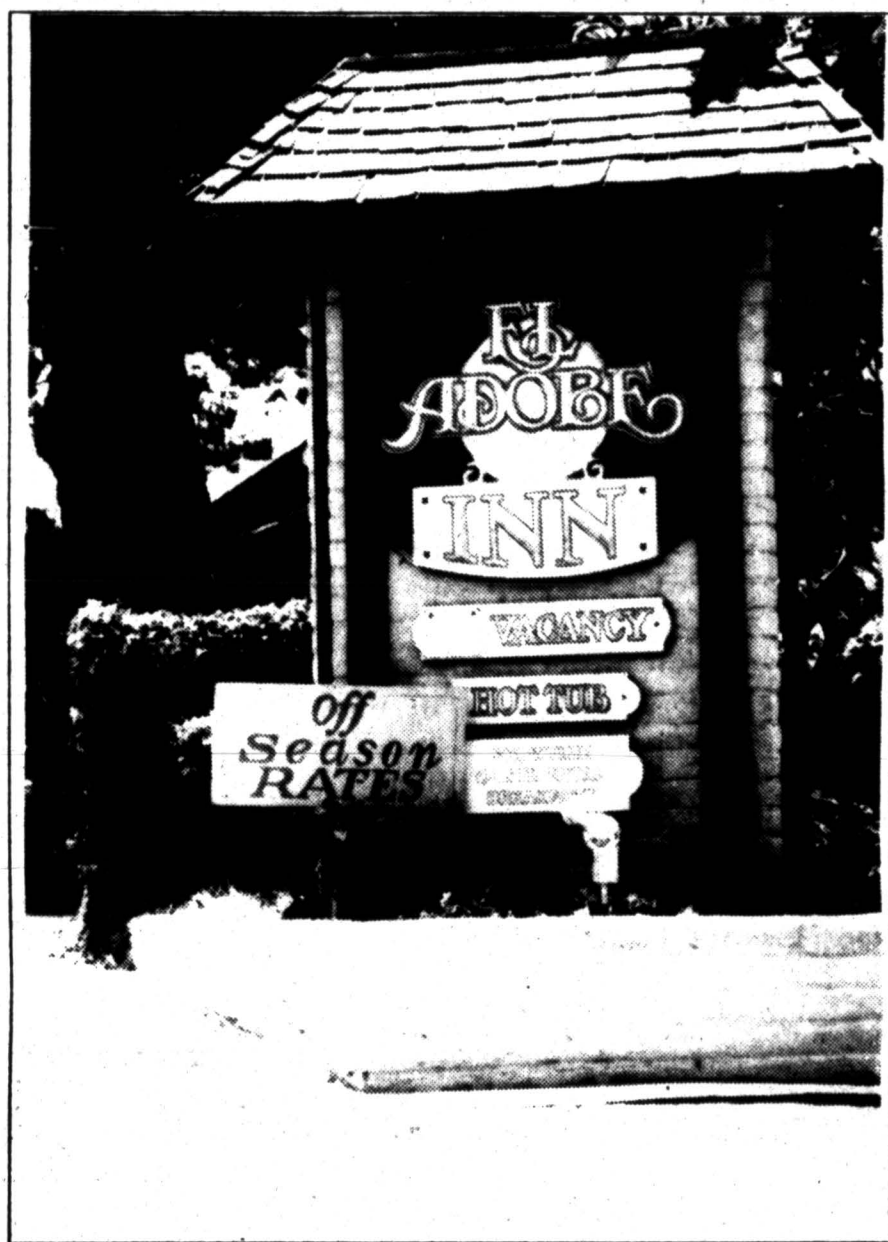

"It is my impression that those people who are being flexible are doing all right," said innkeeper Bob Harr. "You have to be competitive with your prices. You have to make adjustments."

According to Gary Luce, president of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce & Visitor and Convention Bureau, the peninsula has undergone a transformation. Whereas the summer season used to start five or six years ago in mid June, it does not begin in earnest now until mid July.

Other visitor markets, he contended, have outcompeted Carmel, Monterey and other areas. Consequently, both Jepson and Luce are big supporters of improved destination marketing efforts.

This past spring, the Carmel City Council agreed to increase room tax in the village from 10 to 10.5 percent to use most or all of the proceeds to upgrade promotion efforts in conjunction with the CBA.

DRUGS AND PREP SPORTS

Local voices back high court on testing ruling

By JOHN DETRO

SUPREME COURT justices in Washington struck a positive chord locally via this week's decision supporting random drug tests for middle and high school athletes of public districts.

Incoming CUSD superintendent Joe Jaconette will look into issue further.

None of the strong voices came out strictly against Monday's 6-3 vote, which endorsed an Oregon school district's policy on the testing. There, if junior high girls and boys wished to take part in interscholastic sports, they had to provide urine samples under monitored conditions at school.

Interestingly, the same principle that lay behind CUSD's decision on canine drug-sniffers — that schools act as substitute parents — arose in Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia's written opinion.

Scalia rejected arguments that urinalysis violates a student's constitutional rights to privacy. He said students are youngsters who lack adult rights; parents commit them to schools which then take on the parental responsibilities.

The new CUSD superintendent said he had no plans to move in the random testing's direction. And the next student body president at Robert Louis Stevenson School said he favors the decision — without reservation.

Answers collected

All those approached by The Pine Cone said they were familiar with the issue. All had at least heard about the latest development on radio. Replies:

■ Joe Jaconette, who'll take the CUSD superintendent's chair on July 3: "I'd have to read the court's full opinion. I have no plans to do that (random testing). You'd need a full review by a number of people."

"Any decision to even consider that (policy) would need to be studied carefully by the appropriate district committees. By students and parents. I haven't

Offshore drilling foes get break, but battle rages on

Monterey Bay elected leaders Farr, McPherson taking active roles in protecting the California coast from oil, gas leases

By PAUL WOLF

THE PROTECTION of the California coast from offshore oil drilling has turned into a tense year-by-year battle, and supporters of a temporary ban now can breathe a momentary sigh of relief.

Much to the delight of Sam Farr, D-Carmel, the House Appropriations Committee on Tuesday voted 33-20 to extend for another 12 months the 14-year-old federal moratorium on drilling.

Meanwhile, at the state level, Assemblyman Bruce McPherson, R-Santa Cruz, is urging state senators and his colleagues in the lower house to back a joint resolution supporting a federal ban similar to that imposed in state waters last year.

McPherson cast the deciding, and only Republican, floor vote for the California Coastal Sanctuary Act of 1994.

Unfortunately for McPherson, one of the resolution's co-authors, the legislation failed to make it out of Assembly Natural Resources Committee on first reading. It will have a second reading in Sacramento on Monday.

Cautious celebration

"It's time for cautious celebration," said Farr, referring to the Appropriations Committee.

"Although I am heartened by the news that our (federal) coastline has been temporarily spared, I don't think anyone who cares about the environment can truly rest until we see a permanent ban on off-shore oil development."

The Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary establishes a ban on drilling within the sanctuary zone.

Last week, Farr joined other congressional opponents of drilling, including Congressional Republicans, to lobby to continue the ban imposed on the U.S. Department of Interior for spending on offshore oil development.

The threat seemed more palpable this year than in recent years for two reasons:

■ An Interior Department subcommittee voted to lift the ban. That was an apparent indicator of how the full committee would vote.

The subcommittee's action compelled President Clinton to brandish his veto pen.

(Leon Panetta, Farr's predecessor in the 17th District and now White House Chief of Staff, was one of the chief architects of the congressional moratorium.)

■ Many had suspected that the new Republican majority in Congress ushered into office in November could seek a change in direction, according to Mike Diamond, Farr's press secretary.

Diamond said the U.S. Senate is expected to follow the House committee's lead, as it has in years past.

Joining forces

As it turned out, this year's extension of the federal moratorium was introduced by Rep. Frank Riggs, R-Napa, who plans to join forces with Farr to introduce a permanent ban in federal waters, according to Farr's office.

Meanwhile, McPherson said the committee vote in Congress does not mean state legislatures should back off on their resolution.

"We have breathing room, but that's it," he said.

"We need to put forward a message to Washington that says, 'We don't want offshore drilling.'"

YANKEE DOODLE SWEETHEART

■ Born July 4, Carmel woman plans yearly Patriot's Picnic.

By JOHN DETRO

NOT ONLY Uncle Sam's nephew — Yankee Doodle Dandy — was born on the Fourth of July.

The old song says everybody's Independence Day buddy had a Yankee Doodle Sweetheart. Surely that title must be handed over to Martha Mosher of Carmel.

One big reason Martha Mosher loves the annual party so much: She gets to see all of her grandchildren.

Martha, you see, really does celebrate July 4 as her birth anniversary. On Tuesday, she will welcome "between 50 and 60 local friends and relatives" to the 30th annual party honoring both the holiday and her entry into this world. And where will the good times roll?

"Always at the beach," she says. "Wonderful Carmel beach. In the sand at the foot of the steps leading down from Santa Lucia."

She chooses to call the gathering a Patriot's Picnic, putting national emergence in the brightest spotlight.

"Patriotism always has been a real part of this," Mosher says, "from the time it started when the kids were little. 'The troops will rally by the stairs.' We've used that sort of language forever, on the invitations and among ourselves."

The merry gang will include her grown children — Karen, Scott, Amie — and their own youngsters. Mosher, who smiles a lot, laughs outright.

"I'll get to see all five of my grandchildren," she says. "That's a treat. The three families are from the San Francisco Bay Area, so it's not such a terrible drive for them. I guess the longest car trip anyone will make is from Sacramento."

Numbered among local pals at the party will be

As hostess Martha Mosher says, patriotism always has been a major part of the annual celebration. Family members join her neighbors in the enjoyment of good food, cold drinks and various games. This year, the storm-narrowed beach rather limits sports activities.

Jean Grace, former Carmel mayor, and "the Lloyd clan along with Polly Johnson and most of my neighbors on San Antonio. This is my one big 'do' every year."

So Mosher will provide vittles and liquid refreshment — hamburgers, chicken, beer, wine. "Some will bring extra beer or soft drinks — some always come through."

As for her party's traditional games, she thinks the Tuesday slate will be limited to volleyball. Simply because the beach isn't as big as usual this year.

"The storms sucked out the sand," Mosher says. "And beaches just haven't had a chance to build themselves back up. But we're going to enjoy ourselves — as we do every July 4 — and eat and play and have fun."

Seaside 'fortress' in Highlands slated for demolition

■ Critics seek special status for unique Mark Mills home.

By PAUL WOLF

THE CASE of the Farrar home, slated for demolition, offers an assortment of interesting questions for students of historic preservation.

How old must a house grow to be called historic? Who qualifies as being a master builder or architect? When does uniqueness enhance value?

If beauty is in the eyes of the beholder, then the architectural history of any region is not easily catalogued. A group of area residents hope to bring more attention to the Farrar home, named after its original owner.

The structure, located at 166 Spindrift Road, has no formal designations but, some believe, contributes to the richness of the area. Part of the problem is that no inventory of historic or architecturally significant homes exists for the Carmel Highlands, preservation advocates explain.

'Brilliant'

"This house offers a brilliant solution to the problems of the site," commented Janey Bennett, an architectural historian, referring to the unusual engineering techniques that were needed to stabilize the cement bunker on top of large rocks, as opposed to bedrock.

This Spindrift Road home in the Carmel Highlands, a bunker-like structure designed by Mark Mills in the 1960s, will be the subject of a demolition request next month. Critics say it is a unique house that contributes to the richness of the area.

Bennett noted, for example, that its floor is of one piece, allowing it "to float on rubble."

The architect was Mark Mills, a student of Frank Lloyd Wright and a longtime resident of the Carmel area.

David Weekley of Houston, Texas, has bought the property on the condition he can demolish the main structure, as well as the larger, wooden guest house.

On his behalf, Jerry Whitney Design and Development has submitted designs to the Monterey County

Tom Oliver to return to court Oct. 2 on bank fraud charges

PEBBLE BEACH Co. President Thomas Oliver will stand trial again in U.S. District Court in San Jose on Oct. 2.

Last year, Oliver and four other defendants were convicted in federal court on fraud charges connected with their dealings with the defunct Bank of Los Catos in 1984.

However, U.S. District Judge James Ware set aside the convictions because the jury apparently received prejudicial evidence. In March, the U.S. Court of Appeals upheld the Ware ruling.

Last week, Ware rejected defense motions for separate trials for Oliver and the other defendants.

FOCUS ON COMMISSIONS

■ Forestry officials tackle declining Monterey pine forest.

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

CITY FORESTER Gary Kelly called it "one of the best meetings we've had in my recollection...very profitable."

The Forest & Beach Commission held a four-hour workshop Tuesday morning to discuss "long-range issues," such as ongoing forest management policies, pitch canker (the deadly fungal disease) and the thinning of the Monterey Pine Forest on private property.

Commissioners, Kelly said, acknowledged that there was much that could be done to address the loss of private pines: Improved public education. Tree giveaways. "Recognition program" for sensitive home builders who save trees. There were many other ideas.

Over the past 20 years, the city has lost 30 percent of the pines on private property.

At the regular afternoon meeting of the commission, which started at 1:30 p.m., highlights included the commission's decision:

■ To write a letter to the Carmel Board of Realtors urging that organization to help curtail the problem of "unlicensed workers pruning trees," Kelly said.

"Such workers don't know the regulations," the forester said.

■ To pursue the plan to establish a bicycle lane on the west side of San Antonio between Second and Fourth.

The Forest & Beach Commission meets again at 1:30 p.m. July 25.

In other matters concerning city meetings, the Fourth of July holiday Tuesday will push back the regular monthly meeting of the Carmel City Council, which will be held a week later, on Tuesday, July 11. That meeting begins at 3:30 p.m.

The Business District Advisory Committee will hold the only city meeting in the first week of July — scheduled for 8:30 a.m. at the Carmel City Hall conference room.

New Los Padres Dam focus of July 19 debate

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Commercial Property Owners Association will hold a general membership meeting to debate the proposed Los Padres Dam from 8 to 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, July 19 at the Monterey Marriott.

Fran Farina, chair of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, and Paul Davis, an architect with the Paul Davis Partnership, will be speaking in favor of the dam.

Lou Haddad, MPWMD board member, and Roy Gunter, attorney with Murphy, Thompson and Gunter, will be speaking against the dam.

A continental breakfast buffet will be served; the cost is $12 for MPCPOA members and $15 for guests.

Fireworks again a dud in Carmel

■ 4th of July: Not even the 'Safe and Sane' variety will be tolerated in town.

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

IT DOESN'T matter that some Monterey County vendors have tacked up assuring signs on their fireworks booths. You know — "Safe and Sane" or "Approved by the State Fire Marshal."

Anticipating the holiday, the Carmel Police Department issues a reminder: To prevent property damage and injuries, the city "once again will not allow fireworks as part of the celebration — including the 'safe and sane' variety."

Additionally, there are guidelines on beach fires, alcohol consumption, parking and traffic flow:

- FIRES
- These will be allowed on the beach until 10 p.m.
 - No fires will be allowed north of 10th Street or above the high tide line.
 - Burnable material in the fire shall not extend more than two feet above the fire's base. "Flames from the fire shall not extend into the air more than five feet from the burnable material's base."
 - No fire shall be built, lighted or maintained within 25 feet of any wall, vegetation or burnable material not intended to be used in the fire itself.

ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES

"The consumption of alcoholic beverages by persons 21 years of age and over will be permitted only on the beach and only until 10 p.m."

PARKING RESTRICTIONS

Planning commission plans application review July 12

Planning Department for a 6,264-square-foot two-story house.

The Monterey County Planning Commission will review Whitney's application July 12. Earlier this month, the Carmel Unincorporated/Highlands Advisory Committee voted to recommend to the commission denial of the application based upon "viewshed impacts," according to committee secretary Barbara Rainer.

"I would call the house more unique than historic," Whitney commented. "The current home is not a practical home."

Tom Fleming of Del Monte Realty, who represents the sellers, Betsy and Sammy Hagar (the latter being the rock star), was sympathetic.

"Most potential buyers of property in an area like this would not put up with one bedroom and one-and-a-half baths," Fleming said. "The house is functionally obsolete."

Fleming could not disclose how much the property sold for. However, he reported that the Hagars bought the house roughly four years ago for $1.8 million.

The home was on the market for nearly two years, and the Weakleys bought it on the condition they would be able to rebuild.

Although they bought the property late last year, they have received extensions on escrow.

According to Kent Seavey, an architectural history and preservation specialist who does consulting and teaching, the National Historic Register includes buildings under 50 years old if they were built by recognized masters.

Seavey, Bennett and others believe Mills may qualify. According to Seavey, the State Office of Historic Preservation would have to make a determination of eligibility.

Blues Festival gives boost to area tourism, but whether summer will shine remains to be seen

Jepson said the $100,000 the city budgeted to the CBA for the 1995-96 fiscal year to market Carmel-by-the-Sea should allow more out-of-town advertising.

"The problem is you have international travelers driving down the coast and missing Carmel if they didn't know about it beforehand," Jepson said.

Luce is also president of the Carmel-based Inns By The Sea, which includes nine establishments, El Adobe among them. That organization has been aggressively using "promotional rates," which implies rates 25 percent or so below "high season."

The month of June, he said, has been strong, and reservations "appear really good" for July and August. Still, there is no definitive statement to be made about the summer because it is impossible to know how well the rooms would fill up without competitive pricing.

"I know our two Monterey inns have suffered less than our (seven) Carmel inns," Luce said.

Jepson reported that the 51 inns within the Carmel-by-the-Sea city limits were full last weekend nights. Luce said good weekend reports were largely attributable to the boost provided by the Monterey Bay Blues Festival, which drew some 35,000 people.

Fair's new CEO promises changes, but pledges to take them a step at a time

■ Michael Sullivan to report to work July 7.

By JOHN DETRO

HE WILL start next week as the Monterey County Fair's new chief executive officer. And Michael Sullivan already has identified some changes that must be made.

"The fairgrounds must be a year-round operation," he said Wednesday during a telephone interview with The Pine Cone from his home within the tightly interlocked Southern California communities of Apple Valley, Victorville and Hesperia.

"Fairs exist off of interim events — what happens between the county fair runs. I don't want to pinpoint the specific changes right now, but I'll look to see if we're getting the fullest use of a very beautiful fairgrounds. I'll determine what the facility can withstand, and go find the people to assure full use. That's what makes it such a great job."

The 50-year-old Sullivan headed up the San Bernardino County Fair from 1991-93. He was hired by Monterey County Fair trustees last week following a marathon personnel meeting at which the two final-goals for students since you started out as a teacher?

On eve of retirement, superintendent sizes up education

Baldwin: The basic principles haven't changed. We still need to provide a safe, healthy environment for our students. We need to ensure that every student who graduates has a knowledge of the basic skills, such as reading, writing, math and science. We need to pass on the basic values and beliefs that we all rely on to become responsible citizens.

Pine Cone: Has the school district's approach to fulfilling those goals changed over the years?

Baldwin: Because of today's information explosion, we have to concentrate more on helping kids learn how to help themselves to find the answers. We have to give them the ability to be a student for life by focusing on problem-solving skills. Society is changing. We have to adapt and understand, display compassion and a willingness to listen. We have to consider new approaches to the educational system.

Pine Cone: What is CUSD doing to tackle the disparity between what students learn in school and how that knowledge can be used in the job market?

Baldwin: There's always been a lot of interest in restructuring the school system to make it more relevant and meaningful educationally. Every high school student should graduate with a marketable skill. I think we are moving in that direction. We want to make sure our students can apply their knowledge to the world of work.

Pine Cone: What specifically is being done?

Baldwin: The Carmel school district has been working to hook up with the local business community through the Business/Education Alliance of Monterey. The idea is to bring educators and professionals together to make sure we are preparing our kids for what

Baldwin says he'll miss CUSD, just as trustees say they'll miss his leadership

By SUSAN BECK

ALTHOUGH FRIDAY marks his last day on the job, Vance Baldwin's tenure as superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District will not be forgotten.

"We'll miss him terribly," said Pat Condren, CUSD board member. "He's been an outstanding person to work with. He's an honest, straightforward and dependable person."

After 10 years at CUSD, Baldwin announced last December that he would retire at the end of the school year. He was assistant superintendent for six years and superintendent for the past four.

Condren noted Baldwin's "superior" relationship with the CUSD board.

"He's always been open to new ideas to improve education for the students," she said. "He always put the students' needs first."

While he hasn't been counting the days, Baldwin believes it's time to leave.

"There's a part of me that would like to stay," he said earlier this week at his office in Carmel Valley. "This is a great school district. I've been blessed. I've always enjoyed coming to work."

Baldwin began his educational career as a vocational agricultural instructor for the Gilroy Unified School District, where he gradually made the transition from teacher to associate superintendent.

the business community needs, and to help them make the transition from school to the working place. It's an exciting project.

CUSD currently offers work experience opportunities for students to get firsthand knowledge of how different businesses really operate.

Pine Cone: What has been the biggest challenge you've had to hurdle regarding education?

Baldwin: The biggest challenge always is to get the school's staff and administrators and the community to focus on educational priorities. That's the continuing challenge in my view. We get spread too thin. Trying to do too much for too many. I prefer to focus on quality rather than quantity.

Pine Cone: What is the most significant contribution that you've made to the school district?

Baldwin: I've helped to create an atmosphere for change, growth, improvement. I believe our staff feels good about working in the Carmel school system. I think that's probably the most significant contribution. We have a good staff and good relations.

Pine Cone: What has been the most frustrating issue that you've had to deal with during your tenure at CUSD?

Baldwin: I get frustrated about criticism when in my heart I know that there's good teaching going on in our classrooms. We get criticized for things that are out of our control. Today, we have to deal with a lack of funding, changes in society, the diversity of cultures, drugs and alcohol, single parenting, to name a few challenges.

But overall, I think we are doing a darn good job considering the circumstances. I get tired of the criticism. I'm also pretty intense and task-oriented.

I'm interested in results, and I get impatient with the slow pace of the education bureaucracy.

Pine Cone: What are your feelings about leaving the school district after 10 years?

Baldwin: This is a great school district. It has so much potential. Part of me would like to stay and continue working toward taking advantage of the resources, staff and opportunity to make a good school district even better. But I think it's time to leave.

However, I'm not counting the days by any stretch of the imagination. I've been blessed. I've always enjoyed coming to work.

Worse than expected

No one expected good news from the state, but the interpretation that 69 percent of Cal-Am's production — 10,730 acre-feet of its 17,619 acre feet total — is now technically off-limits came as a major shock.

"The magnitude of these figures is staggering," Farina said. "Nobody expected that Cal-Am would be able to prove they had the right to such a small amount of water from Carmel River — only 3,030 acre-feet."

Prior to his CUSD assistant superintendent post, he was the superintendent for Sain Helena Unified School District in Napa Valley.

"Vance's leadership will be missed," said CUSD board member Gary Gray. "He's one of those rare people who gets the job done because he wants results, not because he wants credit. He's so real and candid. There's no hidden agenda. There's never a question about what's on his mind. He'll be leaving behind an enduring legacy that will be hard to match."

Inspired by a retirement gift from his colleagues — golf clubs, bag and cart — Baldwin said his immediate plans include "doing everything I can to make the best use of it."

After a few months of relaxing at home in Monterey, where he lives with his wife, Bonnie, Baldwin plans to get involved in some new venture.

"I have to do something," he said. "I don't know what I'll do, but I can only sweep out the garage so many times."

Laredo commented on the implications: "The community's right to drink, bathe or shower with Carmel River water can continue on only a temporary basis. This explodes the myth that the peninsula has a secure water supply."

Although the state board's hammer is coming down on Cal-Am, its decision could affect everyone, including the MPWMD and the local communities. Its cease and desist order is something of a misnomer; it is really a repayment plan, since Cal-Am has been told to cut back production 15 percent immediately and formulate a plan for making up the deficit.

No one believes the taps will be shut off suddenly.

Pointing the way

By approving water rights for the New Los Padres Dam, the subject of a November ballot measure, the state board was pointing to the way out of the crisis.

That accompanying action was not unexpected. Over the years, the state board has been aware the New Los Padres Dam was being developed to redress the apparent overdrafting of the river. The state board has referred to the $100 million dam as the identified "local solution."

In all likelihood, the state's decision will not alter the dam's allocation plan, which divides the output for drought reserve, new growth, timed river releases and other benefits.

"If the dam is approved, the public will acquire the water rights that Cal-Am assumed it had but didn't," Laredo explained. "It becomes most complicated if the dam fails."

If the public fails to support the dam, he said, Cal-Am could be forced to seek year-to-year approval for its existing practices production until it finds new sources of water in conjunction with the MPWMD.

"We are running out of time and we are running out of alternatives," Farina noted, suggesting the election was a "do-or-die" proposition.

Still fresh in local memory is the failure of a 1993 ballot measure to finance the construction of a modest desalination plant in Sand City.

Asked what Cal-Am would do if the dam were to

State's action at a glance

IN BROAD brush strokes, the State Water Resources Control Board:

- Ended the water rights dispute that began in 1987 with complaints filed by the Carmel River Steelhead Association, the Residents' Water Committee, the Sierra Club and the California Department of Parks and Recreation.

- Placed under its own regulatory jurisdiction all Carmel Valley ground and surface water.

- Determined that 69 percent of Cal-Am's total water production is not based on a valid water right. It was determined the company's underground pumping at Carmel River draws from stream flow, not independent ground water.

- Approved the water right for the New Los Padres Dam, along with a list of conditions.

- Paved the way for current Cal-Am practices to be legitimized should the dam, along with its river-flow improvement features, be developed.

- Ordered Cal-Am to reduce production by 15 percent starting Oct. 1, and 20 percent starting the same date in 1996. That decision may necessitate a mandatory retrofitting or rationing program.

- Determined that any new water supply project would have to contribute half of its output to make up the unlawful diversions from the river.

be defeated in November, Vice President Larry Foy said, "We would have to come up with something. We would be back in some manner, with some kind of project."

But almost in the same breath, Foy recognized the gravity of the numbers. More than 10,000 acre-feet in the hole, the peninsula would have to develop several wells and desal plants to make up the shortfall.

"You couldn't build enough facilities to replace the (Carmel River) water," he said.

For now, water officials are loath to contemplate life without the dam. Such a prospect presents problems that appear to be unsolvable.

Deadline Friday to partake in Macy's benefit

LOCAL ORGANIZATIONS interested in participating in Macy's Benefit Shopping Day have until Friday to register for the Aug. 23 event.

The project provides an opportunity for local charities to raise funds to support their causes. The organizations register in advance and then sell tickets for $10 each. When the tickets are redeemed at Macy's, the organization receives an additional $3 to the proceeds from their ticket sales.

In 1994, some 43 organizations participated and raised $68,000. This year, Macy's hopes there will be greater numbers of participating groups and that the dollars raised to benefit the organizations will total $100,000 or more.

Macy's is holding a series of benefit meetings to help the nonprofits and their volunteers organize ticket sales. Smaller groups can join together to help each other sell tickets.

Shoppers can also purchase tickets at the door. Proceeds from ticket sales the day of the event are divided equally among participating organizations.

Music, refreshments, guest celebrities, children's activities, food demonstrations by local chefs and fantastic sales are planned at Macy's during the one-day community event. Values include a 20 percent discount on apparel and fashion accessories plus a 10 percent discount on non-apparel items, such as fine jewelry, watches, cosmetics and fragrances.

Archives restored after fire damage

Perhaps more fragile, delicate than before, but still usable

By PAUL WOLF

THEY ARE a little beaten and a little battered. But most importantly, they are in one piece.

The 52 bound volumes of The Carmel Pine Cone and three other Brown & Wilson publications that were damaged in the March 21 office fire and sprinkler flood have been saved.

"We were concerned that we might lose a large piece of local history," said Doug Thompson, managing editor of The Pine Cone and The Monterey Peninsula Review. "We are relieved that these volumes will continue to serve as valuable archives."

Roughly $5,000 has been spent to restore the damaged books over the past several weeks, according to Pine Cone Business Manager Patti Saunders, noting the company's insurance has covered the bill.

"We are relieved and thrilled that (the restoration) was successful," she said.

As it turned out, many of the more severely damaged books were also the oldest, dating back to 1916, the year after the historic weekly was launched.

The volumes were located on the floor in the composing area of The Pine Cone newsroom, where an electrical fire set off the automatic sprinklers shortly before 3 a.m.

Because of a wiring problem in the alarm system, the wrong alarm was activated and the Carmel Fire Department never learned of the running sprinklers until until the first employee arrived at 8 a.m.

There has been a degree of anxiety concerning the fate of the volumes because, in most case, they represent the only "hard copies" of The Pine Cone, The Review, The Carmel Valley Outlook and The Pacific Grove Monarch.

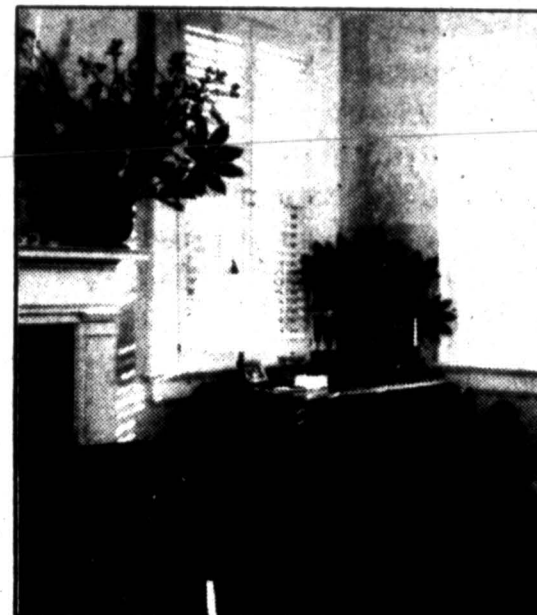

The Harrison Memorial Library has The Pine Cone on microfilm, but does not save the actual newspapers because of space constraints.

The bound volumes have been returned to The Pine Cone offices on Fourth between Mission and San Carlos. "They are fragile and some of the pages are more delicate than before," Saunders explained. "But they are serviceable as archives, which is what counts."

In a restoration effort headed by Ream

Construction & Disaster Cleaning of Seaside, the books initially were put into deep freeze to prevent further damage. Subsequently, the company sought the expert help of paper-restoration specialists.

Fire department: Pair would have drowned

— who was in the June 1995 graduating class of Carmel Middle School — grinned shyly. "I don't feel any different. People say we saved a couple of lives. I'm just one guy who did something. But" — the grin broadened, and brightened his tone — "I kind of like the title. Hero."

And that's accurate. A fire department spokesperson said on Wednesday: "The air here is full of comments about those kids. Consensus — the dad and daughter would have drowned without Mike's courage and timely moves."

The tense sequence started about 4:30 p.m. Monday. Vincent Tannahill, 34, Monterey, had been body surfing with his 12-year-old daughter, Sarah. They were wading close to shore.

Tannahill judged that he and Sarah both are "excellent swimmers." Suddenly, they were battling a rip tide — and losing the fight. Sarah apparently found some footing; the father was carried out much farther.

"Everything happened so fast," Joey said. "I felt like I couldn't react quick enough. Mike could. He reached the girl and brought her in. I went back and loaned my boogie board to a bigger guy on the beach. But he couldn't get past the waves and reach the father. Mike could."

"I think the girl was standing on a sand bar," Mike said. "The rush of the water kept knocking her off. When we hit the beach — I remember her face — she had this big frown. And she sort of held her head. She thought her dad had drowned. She was crying. I jumped back in."

The 6-foot-3-inch teen-ager had two things between himself and disaster — determination and that boogie board.

"I was going out and out," he recalled. "There were big waves. I had to go real fast so they wouldn't swamp me. I watched for her father. He didn't look like a person. He looked like a dark lump — a piece of kelp. We were maybe 200 yards out there."

"I glanced back and saw fire trucks and an ambulance up on the beach," Mike continued. "I didn't see anybody coming for him. So I kept on. I thought this way: 'If I die, OK — I did something useful.' But I reached him. He grabbed one end of my boogie board. We kicked to shore."

Sullivan eager to get started with county fair

ists — from 77 original applicants — were interviewed at great length.

Erstwhile fair head Perry Slocum was terminated by the board after the 1994 edition experimented with costly entertainers and bombed at the box office. There also was an audit of the fair's books.

The Sullivan file

Sullivan, Orange County Fair's one-time public relations coordinator and an ex-radio staff announcer, said: "I resigned (the San Bernardino County Fair) in January of 1994. I found I didn't want to live in the high desert. I'm single, and the time seemed right. I started looking for another fair, while wishing to give my former fair board plenty of time to find a replacement."

"The Monterey County Fair is a business. People are always surprised to hear that county fairs don't get state or county tax money. We are our own business, and I think different things need to be happening (at the grounds) all the time. I've already worked with some of the (food and entertainment) providers. And you'll find I am very upfront with the media."

Sullivan said he has received acquainted phone calls from "a couple of the fair staff members" in Monterey.

"My first job will be to help staff do final preparations for the next fair (opening Aug. 22)," he added. "That's my prime concern. I'll get to know the staff, and give them my philosophy. I'm staff-oriented, and like to know their thinking on various matters."

During last week's interview process, Sullivan said, "I got some sense of the Monterey County Fair's problems. I was informed lightly by the board. Once I get there, I'll get all of what's going on. I hate rumors. When changes come, my style says present everything to the board."

The San Bernardino County Fair, he noted, was no tiny deal. "It's this nation's largest county — all the way from Riverside to the Colorado River at Needles. But I'm excited about the new job and the new place. I'm thankful for the great opportunity. I'm ready to go."

Air pollution district promotes longtime employee to top spot

DOUG QUETIN has been named to head the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District.

Quetin, 45, has been with the district since 1981. He has served as interim air pollution control officer since October of last year.

As control officer, Quetin will supervise a staff of 46. The district has the responsibility for protecting public health and welfare from the effects of air pollution in Monterey, San Benito, and Santa Cruz County.

Prior to assuming the interim position last year, he was the division manager for planning and air monitoring, a post he held since 1984. The planning and air monitoring division is responsible for monitoring pollution levels in the region, as well as for all of the district's planning to meeting state and federal requirements.

Sanctuary council to meet here Friday

■ Brochure snafu slows momentum on commemorative license plates.

By NORA WHITWORTH

WHEN THE Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary Advisory Council meets Friday in Carmel, it will, among other topics, focus on the marketing plan for the new sea otter license plates, which endured a setback last week.

The public meeting is scheduled to run from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Community Room of the Crossroads Shopping Center.

Although orders, according to a Sanctuary spokesperson, have been pouring in since it first became available earlier this month, the application brochure has been pulled and must be reprinted following an edict by the state Department of Motor Vehicles.

DMV objected to the brochure's image of the plate, which differed from the actual winning design of Felton's Boyd Tveit. The actual design depicts a sea otter lying in a bed of kelp with the cliffs of Big Sur in the background; the brochure's design, meanwhile, shows the cliffs and otter in different positions.

Because of the setback, the corrected application brochures aren't expected to be available for a few more weeks.

Nonetheless, representatives of AMBAG will be on hand at 10:15 a.m. Friday to outline the plate's marketing scheme.

Elsewhere at Friday's meeting:

■ National issues to be covered include the proposed dismantlement of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), the parent agency of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary. If the NOAA is dismantled, federal ocean management and weather forecasting would be reduced.

■ Ed Brown, vice president of planning for the Pebble Beach Co., will be sworn in as the council's new tourism representative.

■ As part of the meeting, the Aquaravan, the Monterey Bay Aquarium's traveling interpretive display, will be available to the public in the afternoon.

Now hear this — check your animal's ears

REMEMBER TO check your best friend's ears on a regular basis. If you notice redness, inflammation or signs of pain resulting in head shaking or scratching, see your veterinarian immediately.

To routinely clean your pet's ears, you may want to use a commercial ear preparation (available from your veterinarian or pet supply stores). Tilt your pet's head and, following instructions, apply the preparation, gently massage at the base of the ear and allow the preparation to dissolve any debris and wax. Wrap cotton gauze around your finger to clean the ear.

If you find that you must frequently clean the ears and there is an unusual amount of debris, see your veterinarian.

Microchip implants: Dog tag of the 90s?

Collars and ID tags, tattoos and microchip implants can all be the ticket home for a lost pet — but which is the most effective?

I think there are valid arguments for and against each of these means of identification. Collars and tags are great, but they can slip off if they're not properly secured, and collars can be very dangerous for kittycats. Tattoos are a great idea but they aren't used widely enough to be a reliable means of ID.

Microchip implants are excellent but they can only be identified by the use of a hand-held scanner, and these scanners are costly. (Implants, by the way, are about the size of a grain of rice and can provide a great deal of information like name of the owner, telephone number, full address, distinguishing marks and medical information).

It would take time and a great deal of money for implants to become the accepted means of pet identification, but if every shelter and veterinary clinic in the country had microchip equipment and scanners, lost pets would certainly have a great chance of finding their way home.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By DORIS DAY

Canine anemia

Anemia means there is a deficiency of red blood cells or hemoglobin in the body. Hemoglobin is a protein that carries oxygen to the cells. If your best friend suffers from anemia, you may see signs that not enough oxygen is getting to the body, such as:

- poor exercise tolerance
- chills easily
- loss of appetite
- listless, depression, lack of energy

Check the mucous membranes. The gums should be pink. When you press on them, they should blanch, then return to their natural pink color. The area around the eyes should be pink, not pale.

There are many causes of anemia. If you recognize a problem that you suspect is anemia, your veterinarian can pinpoint the cause and begin treatment.

Volunteer remodeling effort on Sunset administrative offices boon to Carmel

By KEN WHITE
Mayor, Carmel-by-the-Sea

YOUR CITY was recently able to dedicate the completion of the remodeling effort of the administrative offices at Sunset Center.

The remodeling and expansion was made possible by the generosity of a large group of community-spirited people who had set this as a goal several years ago. It is an example of how our citizens in Carmel can come together to solve a problem and do it in such a cooperative way that we can achieve a very beautiful and usable result.

I am speaking of the Friends of Sunset Foundation, a group organized a number of years ago for the specific purpose of enhancing and supporting Sunset Center, Forest Theatre and Scout House.

For many years, the administrative offices at Sunset Center have been woefully inadequate and desperately in need of upgrading. Enter the Friends of Sunset — they took on this task for their first large project! Jim Gregg of Carmel Heritage learned of the project and stepped forward to offer his considerable talents, undertaking the job of supervising the operation.

Many contractors and vendors from throughout the area were contacted and provided time, materials and labor to the project. As a result, we now have a lovely completed project and an office for Sunset Center's director in which the entire community can take pride. You are welcome to drop by Sunset Center and see the results of this community effort.

Donations invaluable

The total value of donated construction is approximately $70,000. The Friends of Sunset Foundation contributed some $19,000 to the project. As a result of this tremendous effort and generosity, the taxpayers were saved a significant sum and the actual cost to the city's treasury was only $13,000.

On behalf of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea and all of our residents, we would like to express our deep and grateful appreciation to the following individuals and firms who gave so generously of their time and talent to the renovation of the Sunset Center offices:

- Archimage, Robert Paravicini (design and working drawings);
- Carmelo & 13th Partners and Jim Gregg of Carmel Heritage (project management demolition and labor);
- Cate Electrical Company, Inc. (all electrical installation);
- Chris Tescher Construction (framing);
- Consolidated Electrical Distributors (electrical equipment and materials);
- Hayward Lumber Company (wallboard);
- Jon Ramsey (demolition and finish labor);
- Tim Mallery (finish carpentry and labor); and
- Tri-County Insulation and Acoustical Contractors of Santa Cruz (insulation materials and installation).

Our sincere thanks to you all!

Latest round of disbursements made in flood relief

THE DISBURSEMENT Committee established in connection with the Monterey County Flood Relief '95 Telethon has issued a new round of grants totaling $150,000 to non-profit agencies to help victims of this year's unprecedented floods in Monterey County.

Coupled with grants announced in May, the latest distribution bring a total of $429,000 in grants issued from money raised in connection with the April 26 benefit telethon and dinner at the Monterey Conference Center.

The newest round of grants includes:

■ Salvation Army Monterey Peninsula Corps — $12,500 for direct assistance to Carmel area residents affected by floods and other assistance forwarded to North County as needed.

When the telethon went off the air, a total of $517,000 in pledges and donations had been made. More than 90 percent of the total pledges have been received.

Those who have not yet fulfilled their pledges may still do so by mailing checks to Community Foundation-Flood Relief, P.O. Box 1384, Monterey, Calif. 93942-1384.

Wherever in the world you walk, make sure you wear the world's ultimate walking shoe.

Good news!... to locals and visitors alike! We are fortunate indeed to be a home to a true Mephisto concept store here in Carmel. Now beginning its third year, it is still one of just a handful in the United States. We should mention that Renne Agee and her son, Gregory, have been successfully selling the Mephisto footwear for over six years in Carmel - previously at Renne's Birkenstock Footprint shop. They find great pleasure in selling someone their first pair of Mephistos. "It's like making a friend for life." Mephisto's durability is legendary. Make sure to choose a style you like, for you can plan on wearing it for many years to come. Countless Mephisto owners have reported to us that they are still wearing the same shoes 15 or more years after their purchase. All the shoes are resoleable, so they deal with customers all over the country and many in Canada.

Mephisto is quite simply the finest walking shoe on earth. Its comfort, support and durability are recognized wherever people take walking seriously. In fact, Mephisto has become the most popular walking shoe in virtually every country in which it's been introduced - selling more than 2 million pairs annually in Europe alone.

Throughout our nearly three decades of existence, Mephisto has been in the forefront of innovation in walking shoe design and construction. They have been responsible for such revolutionary features as speed laces and air-circulation insoles. What's more, while other walking shoes are often 100% synthetic, rarely seeing a human hand in their manufacture, Mephisto remains a natural product (soft leather, latex, cork and rubber) and continues to be hand made one shoe at a time in the matchless European tradition. In short, they've remained impervious to the elements and to the temptation to turn to cheaper, manmade materials.

Seek out this unique shop and treat yourself to your first pair of real walking shoes. For men and women - sandals from $98 - $170; shoes from $198 - $325.

Where There's a Will...

By THOMAS HART HAWLEY

Uncle Sam's 'loss' is the taxpayer's gain

UNCLE SAM has some rather embarrassing gaps in his formal education — geometry being one.

In fact, if the truth be known, Uncle Sam thinks Euclid refers to a tribe of North American Eskimos. Therefore, he never grasped the basic Euclidian hypothesis that the whole is equal to the sum of its parts.

Uncle Sam's loss is the taxpayer's gain — especially when it comes to making annual exemption gifts of large assets, such as family businesses or vacation homes, to younger generations. Allow me to explain:

Let's assume that Art and Ellie Dodger own a business that has been recently appraised for $200,000. The Dodgers want to transfer the business to Roger so it will not be taxed in their estate.

As I hope you know by now, Art and Ellie can give Roger $20,000 each year tax free. Your lightening mathematical sense no doubt tells you the Dodgers can give Roger only 10 percent of the business in the first year. Your lightning mathematical sense is wrong.

■ Minority discount: Remarkably, Uncle Sam allows the value of a minority interest to be discounted. The theory is that the minority interest is worth less because it is subject to the control of the majority owners. This is true even if the majority owners, to wit: Art and Ellie, happen to be the parents of the minority owner, to wit: Roger.

How much less? That is for an appraiser to determine. A 20 percent discount for a minority interest is not unusual. In that case, the Dodgers could give more than 10 percent of the business to Roger the first year and still be within the $20,000 annual exemption. And that's not all.

■ Marketability discount: As in many families, there is friction between Ellie and her daughter-in-law (Roger's wife). In fact, Ellie has mentioned with great feeling (not to mention alliteration) that she would "first fry in hell" before letting Roger's wife get her "fat little fingers" into the family business.

Therefore, the Dodgers have asked their clever attorney to draft up an agreement giving them the right to buy back Roger's interest at a set price if he dies before they do. This buyout agreement eliminates the risk that Roger's wife will get involved in the business. It also further reduces the value of the gift to Roger since this restriction makes Roger's interest less marketable.

This, in turn, allows The Dodgers to give to Roger an even greater percentage of the business and still stay within their $20,000 annual exemption.

■ The entity: The form of the Dodgers' business is important. For example, if the business is conducted as general partnership, the gift to Roger will make him a general partner. As such, he will have unlimited personal liability for debts of the partnership. Roger may be reluctant to accept this risk. Roger also will have a share of the management of the business. Art may be unwilling to accept this risk.

If the business is a limited partnership, Roger, by law, can have no management authority. If the business is a corporation, Art can limit Roger's authority by giving him non-voting stock only.

In both cases, and in the case of a limited liability company as well, Roger's liability will be limited.

■ Next time (July 13): At last, the news all of you've been waiting for!

HEALING OLD WOUNDS

Rabbi, 2 pastors speak out on emerging unity

By JOHN DETRO

IF IT does not unify, the ancient poets said, it cannot be called thinking. Moreover, if it does not reconcile illusory separations between people, it qualifies as mortal experiment and not God's lasting work.

Today, fresh evidence of the unitive surge appears in varied settings — genetics lab, church convention, busy urban parish.

Responding to Pine Cone questions, area religious leaders called the apparent thrust everything from "the new urgency" to "a great awakening" and "the recognition of pain that has been caused in the name of religion."

Here's a look at representative events:

■ A genetics research team recently put forth the Adam Theory: All men really are brothers, since molecular analyses of sex-determining Y chromosomes show that all men are descended from a small group of male ancestors.

Yale biologist Robert Dorit did the research with Hiroshi Akashi from the University of Chicago and the Nobel laureate Walter Gilbert (Harvard). When the theory was published in May, Dorit said: "The differences between us, as socially striking as we may wish to make them, are largely irrelevant from (the team's) viewpoint."

■ Dateline: Atlanta. The Southern Baptist convention, born of the split between North and South over slavery and still overwhelmingly white, apologized to African Americans last week for condoning racism throughout so many decades. A vote favoring the resolution got a standing ovation from 20,000 members of the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

The document repudiates "historic acts of evil such as slavery" and asks forgiveness. While noting that the denomination did not support the 1960s civil rights movement, it promises the church's 15.6 million members will work to erase "vestiges of racism."

■ Dateline: San Francisco. Members of St. Mark's Lutheran Church recently invited congregants from a nearby synagogue to join them in their sanctuary. The purpose, as described by S.F. Chronicle religion writer Don Lattin, was to apologize and "ask forgiveness for the vicious but little-known anti-Semitism of their founding father, Martin Luther."

The special evening involved both groups in a nine-block procession to Congregation Sherith Israel. Apparently responding to the joint services, someone smeared an exterior wall at St. Mark's with Nazi swastikas.

Luther wrote of "this depraved and condemned people, the Jews," adding in a tract that synagogues and Jewish schools should be burned. Pastor Richard Schaper of St. Mark's: "This ceremony (two groups praying as one) is deeply needed."

The Pine Cone telephoned one rabbi and two pastors, asking these questions: 1) Do you agree that some pattern of reconciliation is in operation? 2) Will you respond to the recent development that touched people of your widespread faith group?

Rabbi Bruce Greenbaum
Congregation Beth Israel
in Carmel Valley

Rather than call it 'reconciliation,' I would use 'awareness of people.' It is no longer the 'us/they' approach, but more of the 'we' togetherness. Perhaps we've seen that the world is only so big, and that God has given us only so many resources. We must learn how to share and appreciate one another mutually.

You can see it in world politics, too. There are many more summit meetings and coalitions being formed. The Berlin Wall coming down was part of it. We learn that, as in the Tower of Babel story, too much separateness becomes unhealthy.

The Lutherans (of St. Mark's) took a nice step forward. It may be the recognition of pain that has been caused in the name of religion. Many Catholic churches and leaders express recognition that the Vatican's silence during the Holocaust was a mistake.

Pastor Roy Blumhorst
St. Philip's Lutheran Church in Carmel Valley

There's a real impulse now for religions to find their common ground. When you look at Bosnia and Ireland, you can see the need.

If we all believe in one God, there is a new urgency in our job of locating that common ground. The world gets smaller and smaller; we cannot sit in our little ghetto — Lutheran ghetto, or whatever. Maybe we're trying to figure out how to love one another. Instead of trying to 'convince' one another.

Anti-Semitism was part of our tradition. If there's any lingering result, it needs to be cleared up.

Last April, our congregation was invited by Rabbi Bruce Greenbaum to regular Friday evening services at the temple. We took part, and enjoyed the rituals, and didn't feel any compulsion to make Christianity and Judaism blend entirely. The question was: How can we, acting together, make a difference in this valley?

We also celebrated the accords with St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church of Carmel Valley. Summertime is when we talk about upcoming programs, so we'll be planning more of these 'common ground' things.

The Rev. W.S. Knight, Jr.
First Baptist Church of Marina
(Southern Baptist)

The greater part of the Southern Baptist denomination is not part of the ecumenical movement. This is viewed as man's movement, and the Southern Baptist Church seeks God's leadership.

Yes, there seems to be a great awakening on the horizon, which is what many, many groups have been praying for. I refer to Christocentric evangelical churches, those that embrace Christ's great commission to go out into the world as witnesses for the message: Salvation is available to everyone.

You could say that the Monterey Peninsula is our Jerusalem, and from here we move outward. Southern Baptists are known for being mission-minded.

An awakening. Billy Graham, who's a Southern Baptist, feels that the coming of Christ is near. I'm of that conviction, too. I detest those books which give specific dates. No man knows the

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams
Many people put more time into planning vacations than future retirement, and many think only about how much money they will need for retirement. So says a retirement consultant who has found that people tend to ignore the significant changes that lie ahead. A common difficulty is what to do about all the free time. He cites examples of people who had planned certain trips and projects, but when these were done in relatively short time they faced 20 or 30 more years of retirement without any plans. Another subject needing attention and adjustment: living with a spouse 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

James Rouse was a developer on a grand scale: the planned town of Columbia, Maryland, was one of his triumphs. Guests at his 80th birthday party in New York learned of his current interest: promoting a foundation for developing affordable housing in low-income areas. "When you get to be 80 you become useful as a hook," Rouse told reporter. "the party is really not to celebrate my birthday but to raise money for the poor."

IN APPRECIATION: GIULIO DE PETRA 1910 - 1995

Competitor turned crusader for neglected sport

By PAUL WOLF

PEOPLE ALWAYS recognized the young race walker in such towns as Lama dei Peligni, where he learned his sport at the tender age of 14.

When he was 18, Giulio de Petra strode down cobbled avenues in Naples to become Italy's national champion in 1928. A celebrity in a celebrated pursuit, he traveled to big races around the world — in countries that also esteemed race walking.

But fate would land him in the U.S., where the national pastime is baseball, and his accomplishments were obscure. He continued to walk, more tirelessly as he grew older. Now, however, the real race was to bring his sport prominence.

When he died last week at 84, that goal was still somewhere off on the horizon.

Tireless advocate

"That was his mission, and he often said it," recalled his daughter, Hansi Rigney. "He wanted people to start race walking and give up running, which he believed was harder on the body."

Although he was struck by a heart attack at his Carmel Highlands home, family members note he experienced hardly a day of sickness in his long life and was known for his abundant vitality.

Giulio lived, breathed and spoke passionately about race walking. Fittingly, he left this world with his favorite pair of walking shoes on.

Ultimately, he will be remembered for two personas: the iron-willed competitor and the unrelenting crusader.

In that second role, Giulio was never able to match his own notoriously high standards. It was as though the control he possessed in a race could not be used to make people embrace race walking.

"He always felt that race walking was the orphan child of the track and field world," said his son, Peter de Petra.

But evaluating his father's success may be subtle business. Although the running boom waned after its peak in the 1970s, the aerobics revolution has remained alive and well. Among the power walkers, stair climbers and hikers, there is room for those who sport the waddling gait and swiveling hips.

They are now part of the landscape — and with less self-consciousness than ever, thanks to people like Giulio, who founded the Monterey Peninsula Walk Walk Club and served as its longtime president.

"He was disappointed in the renaissance (of walking), that there was not more of a boom," Peter observed.

A retired Italian instructor and department chair at the Defense Language Institute, Giulio had always hoped to restore the glory days of Europe. The club staged races, supported promising walkers and generated publicity.

Later victories

Meanwhile, he continued to compete into his eighth decade, winning World Master's titles in races up to 20 kilometers (12.4 miles). Some of his later victories partially made up for the fact that he missed three Olympic games during his prime (1936, 1940 and 1944) — once because he was inducted into the Italian Army and twice because the games were canceled due to World War II.

There were many who sought to convince him that race walking was hardly dead. Better shoes, sophisticated training and a streamlined form of locomotion sped up performances astonishingly. Giulio debunked the new stride, questioning its legality. He called it "lifting," that is, failing to keep one foot in contact with the ground at all times.

A recent picture of Giulio de Petra, who kept a rigorous training schedule into his 80s.

In 1928 at the age of 18, De Petra won the Italian national championship in Naples.

Giulio never abandoned the high-stepping, marching "Old Style." New walkers at the club learned the sport his way. Sometimes they parted company with him on form, but they maintained their respect.

"He changed the course of my life," said Kim Wilkinson, a Pacific Grove resident who five times has run for the national women's race walking team. "He was always my mentor."

Great find

De Petra discovered Wilkinson in 1988 when she was pushing her baby in a stroller — faster than anybody he had seen do that before. He recognized her potential and quickly became her first coach.

Tenacity was his central trait, along with healthy doses of discipline and enthusiasm. Those who remember him will recall a ferocious willpower, which helped him win races and maintain a rigorous training schedule (he did a hard two-hour walk two days before he died) when others would have made concessions to time.

This iron will that served Giulio de Petra so well as an athlete could only lead to partial success as a popularizer.

De Petra comfortably holds the lead during a local race in Polena, Italy, in 1945, just after World War II.

Locals support high court ruling on teen drug testing

Ables: Who would monitor such a program?

heard of any plans to consider the move."

■ Lisa Fraser, athletic director at CHS: "I thought the decision was interesting. People have been undecided about the issue for a long time. Frankly, I was surprised. And personally, I wish it wasn't even necessary."

"But as things are — well, nothing changes unless it changes. There's higher and higher drug usage, and research says it does affect athletic performance. Privacy's important to a lot of folks, but we have to preserve what's best in sports, too."

■ Jeff Young, athletic director at Robert Louis Stevenson School. He coaches football and lacrosse.

"I'm all for it. That's my personal opinion about the random testing — not the school's. As a coach, parent and teacher, I would think drugs would not be permitted as a part of team policy. The (court ruling) seems to fit in well with the philosophy of a sports program."

"I wonder: If you're going to do it in athletics, why not do it in the whole school? It seems like something that should be part of the entire school curriculum."

"The War on Drugs is not being won. I don't necessarily want people to give up rights, but at that age there's still a chance to make headway (against drugs). Testing may deter some, and help those who have started to get back on the right trail."

"And it would give a coach more leverage. It would add strength to a coach's policies."

Davi speaks out

■ John Davi will take the gavel in September as the next student body president at RLS: "I'm not against this at all. Drug use in high schools is way up there. It has an effect on many students. If you don't do drugs, you know someone who does."

"I read about an Olympic swimmer who tested positive in 1972 because he was taking asthma medicine. If a person is accused wrongfully, I think there will always be a chance to prove no wrongdoing."

"I don't see how (the ruling) can have any negative effect. If there were a negative effect, it would be far outweighed by the positive."

■ John Ables, CHS track coach: "I'm going to go slowly on this one. I don't like the invasion of anyone's privacy. And yet I'm so much against drugs. The word 'random' scares me. Who gets tested? And who makes that decision?"

"The plus side. I'm all for it if the people administering (tests) are the right people. I've always been concerned about steroids in track. Steroids do work — they'll kill you, but they work. And they take scholarships away from kids who are doing the right things."

"The minus side. If coaches decide who's to be tested, some coach might pick his second-string offensive tackle rather than his star quarterback."

"Lots of track officials are concerned that kids aren't being tested. I feel everyone should be tested. How to do it effectively is what worries me."

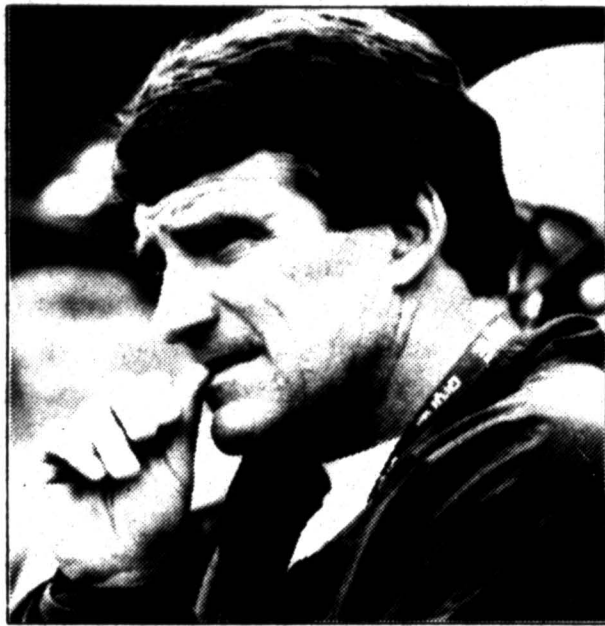

■ Heather Blackwell, RLS triple jumper who'll be a senior come September: "Yes, I would agree with the ruling. I don't think it's fair for student athletes to use drugs to do better. It's not fair."

"I wouldn't have a problem with being tested. I know I'd test negative. I'd be paying for those who do use drugs. I'd be angry in a way, but not really."

"I shouldn't be suspected in the first place. I have to trust (those in charge of testing), because so many others are doing drugs."

■ Melissa May, CHS all-league selection in boys' soccer, was on vacation. Her father, Carmel business owner Don, responded: "I lean toward agreeing with the U.S. Supreme Court. In my eyes, it's only a small invasion of privacy. If through random testing we save one child from drug addiction and death, the loss of privacy is worthwhile. And, yes, that includes my own athlete daughter."

■ This business proprietor was a four-sport man at CHS before he graduated in 1946. All five of his children graduated from CHS, and all were in sports. Lifelong Carmel resident Marty Irwin: "I have mixed emotions. At first

Jeff Young

I thought the decision was good. Yet it's a shame that a vast majority of the kids who don't have drug problems still would go through testing."

False positives?

"I hear there's a danger of 'false positive' results. A kid could test again, but isn't it a traumatic experience? If an athlete felt strongly about personal rights, that person might pull out."

"I'm ambivalent. But I'm law-abiding. Now it's the law of the land. We don't have a choice, do we?"

■ This radio broadcaster and publisher has lived in Carmel since 1968. His two sons graduated from CHS after playing varsity sports. Sam Salerno: "I go along with the decision. I don't think it affects constitutional rights."

And look at how many drugs we have in schools today."

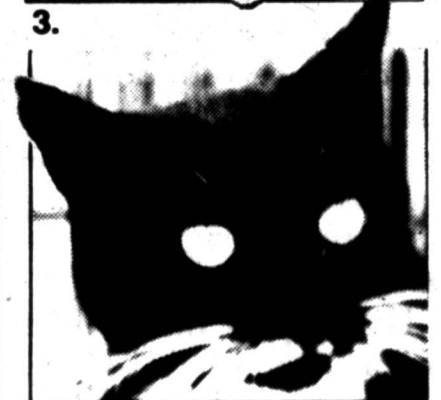

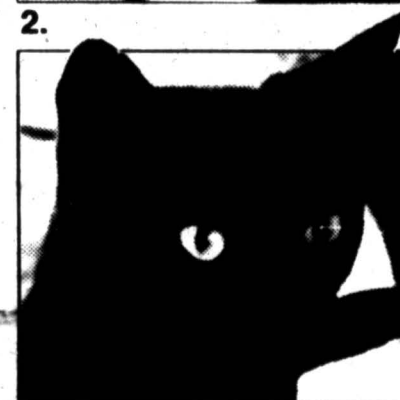

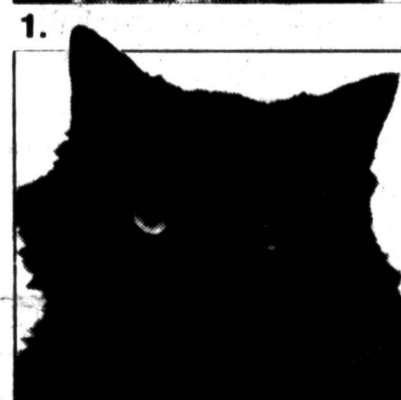

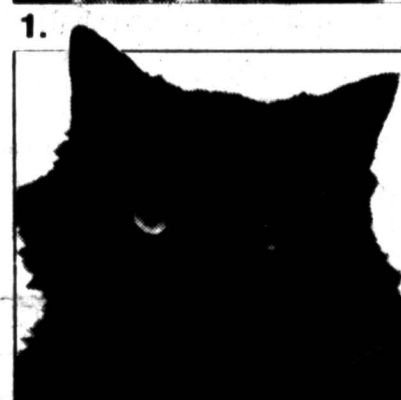

"It wouldn't harm athletes to be tested on a regular basis. If my sons still were at Carmel High, I'd say — 'test them.' This is how I feel about it."

■ An avid golfer and follower of CHS teams, he played baseball and soccer at Palo Alto High, and now has a downtown Carmel restaurant. Greg Cellitti: "If I were a kid, I'd be angry. It's a sign of no trust. I wouldn't like being tested."

"What next? Go through everybody's locker? But from the official viewpoint, it's probably justified. Especially with all the drugs going around — ice, crack. It's either test or close the campus."

FOURTH OF JULY FOR PETS

Americans celebrate the Fourth of July with a bang. But if you have pets, please remember... fireworks are no fun for them!

The dazzling lights and crackling of fireworks can terrify pets, and The SPCA frequently sees a rise in the number of stray dogs and cats after this holiday.

If you have pets, The SPCA suggests you keep your animals secure during this holiday, especially if you have fireworks displays in your area. Consider keeping your dog or cat in your home, or on a leash outside, and be sure you have the proper identification tags on your animals!

Some animals become so unnerved by fireworks that owners may consider giving them a tranquilizer. The SPCA urges pet owners to consult a veterinarian about this; DO NOT give your pet ANY medication you may take.

NOTE: Animals pictured are subject to prior adoption or return to owner/companion. Adoptions are to qualified homes only. If these animals have been adopted, there are other adorable animals available... come on out! AND, PLEASE, HAVE YOUR PETS SPAYED OR NEUTERED

We make a donation to The SPCA the first time you use our service.

GIVE A LEG UP

Of Clint Eastwood, Odello East and the 'legs' of Madison County

By JOHN DETRO

CLINT EASTWOOD can always get a meal at the tourist-packed Hog's Breath Inn. And the former mayor probably could raise a couple of bucks on his signature anywhere in Carmel.

But there are other reasons folks hereabouts don't fret much about the movie icon's budgetary condition.

For many years, he has been listed annually as a top-ranking entertainment moneymaker by business magazines that keep count.

Movie house owners as well as Oscar voters have named the actor and director as their favorite (read it their most profitable) star.

Last week, Eastwood and his ex-wife, Maggie, said they would buy the Odello artichoke farm at Carmel Valley's mouth (Pine Cone, June 22). The prospect of development? Still a rather open question.

Also last week — the coincidence was not insignificant — critics and box office analysts agreed that Eastwood's latest film "has legs." Translation: staying power in terms of week-by-week profit totals reported by the best industry magazines.

The Bridges of Madison County stars Eastwood and Meryl Streep in an Eastwood-directed effort. Even with Batman Forever scoring a record $53.3 million in first-exposure receipts last week, Bridges claimed $6.7 million and fourth place on the dollars roster.

Good word of mouth

Wrote one respected commentator: "Expect Bridges to hang around the charts for a long time. In the midst of all the blockbuster summer fare, there is nothing else like Bridges out there right now. And the word-of-mouth on the film is good."

With that news breaking and the Eastwood track record to ponder, it doesn't take a tax attorney to figure he must keep his money moving — via land investments and fresh movie projects along with the man's new Malpas jazz record label — lest the feds take mercilessly bloody bites.

The Odello deal fits into a longtime Eastwood pattern. Following yet another filmic success, his wide-ranging staff (from Carmel to Burbank and back) will be turned loose on yet another local project involving important acreage.

Cynical observers might think the profit-and-plowback cycle means solely to short circuit the federal taxation machine, which gobbles up static funds like popcorn.

But there's another side to Eastwood. Through personal and financial commitments, he always has given this area much more than many another celebrity might.

So if you bet on the Odello land as open space retained, or modestly developed space, that would not be a stupid wager.

Remember the comment when his preservation-themed Mission Ranch project first was under discussion?

"We may not be able to halt progress," Eastwood said, "but we can try."

Decisions around the Odello property will make news for at least several months.

May those "legs" of Madison County fare just as well.

California and its children: two issues, two solutions

■ School reform: Work on the next choice initiative began day after defeat of last one.

By DR. ALAN BONSTEEL

ANOTHER SCHOOL year has drawn to a close, and California's public schools are worse than ever.

Californians were still getting over the news, released in early April, that the second — and last — CLAS test showed dramatic performance declines compared to the first test, when, in late April, we were stunned with the news that the federal National Assessment of Educational Progress ranked California's fourth graders tied for dead last with Louisiana in reading skills compared to their peers in other states.

Throughout the year as well, news media reports of violence in California's public schools drove home the disturbing message that California's families can no longer take for granted the safety of our children on public school campuses.

The school year began with the election of Superintendent of Public Instruction Delaine Eastin, an individual who owes her entire political career to special interest money from the California Teachers Association. Five months after taking office, she has accomplished nothing, and in fact has strongly opposed all of the basic reforms that could improve California's public schools short of a citizens' initiative:

■ An end to tenure, the system that makes teaching in California's public schools a government job guaranteed for life;

■ An end to the artificial limit on the number of Charter Schools, or schools of choice within the public sector, that the State Department of Education grudgingly allows; and

■ An end to the limits on interference in the political process by teachers' unions. This opposition, of course, coming as no surprise given how beholden Eastin is to the CTA.

Fallout from Prop. 174

In November 1993, Californians had their first opportunity to vote for real school reform through Proposition 174, which would have mandated freedom of choice among competing schools, both public and private. Skeptical voters turned it down following a campaign in which we were outspent eight-to-one, but proponents won a moral

■ Carseat safety: New bill would launch a three-pronged educational effort to save lives.

By ELISA ODABASHIAN

MORE AND more kids are dying and being injured each year on California's roadways, despite a 13-year-old law which makes it illegal to allow children under the age of four or 40 pounds to ride unrestrained by carseats.

According to the California Highway Patrol, since 1983 (one year after the passage of the child safety seat law in California) the number of kids under age four who were killed in automobile accidents has increased by 24 percent, and the number of injured has increased by 51 percent. Many of these deaths and injuries, according to the CHP, would have been averted had carseats been in use.

Consumer Reports (January, 1992) states that "automobile accidents represent the biggest single threat to child safety in the U.S. Each year, car crashes kill some 700 youngsters under age five and injure another 60,000 to 70,000.

Elisa Odabashian is an administrator with Consumers Union, publisher of Consumer Reports, an independent, non-profit testing and information gathering organization.

"The law of physics has particularly cruel consequences for children. A crash at 30 mph will propel an unrestrained 15-pound baby with some 300 pounds of force — equivalent to a fall from a three-story window. The same 30-mph crash can be just as lethal if an adult cradles the baby. An adult wearing a safety belt won't have the strength to hold onto a child in a crash. And an unbelted adult will crush the baby with one to two tons of force."

Either people don't realize just how deadly the risks for children are, or else they don't know about the carseat law. Or worse, they know about the law and the risks, but they just can't afford a carseat.

SB 503 to the rescue

Senate Bill 503 (authored by Sen. Nicholas Petris, D-Oakland) received bi-partisan support from the California Senate and is now headed for the Assembly.

This bill launches a three-pronged educational effort on the carseat issue, and refines the administration of the low-cost and loaner carseat programs created in the original law so that more families who cannot afford carseats can get them and learn the importance of using them.

victory through a Luntz-Weber exit poll showing 74 percent of California's voters favoring school choice in principle, but demanding an initiative that guarantees no new taxes or spending. Despite the assertions of the public school establishment, these specifications are not hard to meet.

Work on the next school choice initiative for the November 1996 ballot began the day after the defeat of the last one.

What is astounding about the public school establishment's lack of response to the impending challenge is that although preparations for the next school reform initiative have been well publicized from the outset, and despite public school quality problems so extreme that California's public school teachers are enrolling their own children in private schools at almost twice the rate of the general public, the public schools have failed to enact even the most fundamental reforms to meet the challenge.

The teachers' unions have promised to spend "whatever it takes" in the next election to preserve the public school monopoly, but with a bullet-proof initiative in which the no-new-taxes-or-spending guarantee is carved in stone in the state constitution, with plenty of time for the reformers to organize and raise money. With the public school bureaucracy shooting itself in the foot, "whatever it takes" isn't going to be enough the next time.

What drives educational choice advocates is the shining ideal of an educational system in which each child is considered an individual, each with his or her needs that need to be met and each with his or her special gifts that deserve to be nurtured.

We believe that the struggling single mother has the same right to a quality education for her child — the same right to choose the best school — that the bigshot in the penthouse office has always enjoyed.

Our crusade is for an educational system that is as good as the American people, and that keeps alive the hopes and aspirations we have for this country.

Pot full of problems

Dear Editor:
I can see one area where the efficient use of Carmel's resources can be improved. The storms of the past winter have left many of Carmel's streets full of potholes.

However, the city crews have been busy installing fancy brick sidewalks instead of patching these streets. I have called Carmel Public Works several times to report this problem and was assured it would be given attention.

Let's get our priorities right: The sidewalks could have waited.

Editorial applauded

Dear Editor:
We were most impressed with The Pine Cone's editorial of June 15 on the transient occupancy tax (TOT) issue so surreptitiously dealt with by the Carmel City Council.

While your editorial will undoubtedly evoke some rancor, we applaud its cogent and balanced review of the issue. By using the analogy of Monterey's room tax measure, you clarified for us the fact that the TOT is a tax on which the voters of Carmel should be consulted via the ballot.

Was the council majority so easily swayed that they failed to see their obligation to represent the people who voted them into office? Or, was it just a case of becoming so excited about a plan that they truly felt the Carmel citizenry would embrace their decision?

Whatever their mindset, we would strongly encourage them to seek greater input from Carmel citizens through the ballot process before making a final decision July 11.

SB 503 bound for Assembly

Current law earmarks part of the fine money from each violation of the carseat law (approximately $271) for low-cost and loaner carseat programs in the county where the violation occurs. Unfortunately, in many counties, this money has never reached those programs.

SB 503 would change that by designating a coordinator at each county health department to work with the courts to ensure the proper transfer of the fine money to the low-cost and loaner programs. It also would provide for a regular updating of the listing of low-cost and loaner carseat programs by each county health department.

SB 503 is a refinement of the existing law, with insights gained from 13 years of experience, which makes the programs initially created run more efficiently. In essence, this bill, with no new costs to state or county agencies, makes for more effective government. And it will save the lives of children.

Victims are voiceless

There are some politicians who label

SB 503 "nanny bills." In other words, they believe that parents do not need to be told how to care for their children. These politicians feel that, while we need laws that protect kids from pornography and ensure that they go to school and are off the streets by a certain hour of night, we do not need a law that educates people about the risks of death and injury from allowing children to ride unrestrained in a car.

And yet, this is the single greatest killer of young children in this country.

The violators of the carseat law are not the victims. The victims are voiceless — little kids who are powerless to save themselves. We have a responsibility to protect the children of California by doing everything we can to educate and encourage people to abide by the law.

Editor's Note: Those interested in voicing their opinion on SB 503 should call Assemblyman Bill Morrow, R-Oceanside, at 619/757-8084. SB 503 is expected to come before the Assembly Transportation Committee in the next few weeks.

Food, fun, fireworks!

HERE ARE a few of the celebratory events taking place Tuesday in Monterey and Santa Cruz counties:

■ City of Monterey: BBQ, parade, fireworks

THE CITY of Monterey hosts its annual Fourth of July all-day celebration beginning at 10 a.m., offering a parade, live music and plenty of food.

The parade takes place on Alvarado Street and Calle Principal from 10 to 11 a.m., and will include Monterey Mayor Dan Albert, the Feast of Lanterns Royal Court, circus performer Peter Dragula, Samba Cruz and Ballet Folklorico de Monterey Dancers.

The admission-free Big Little Backyard Barbecue and Entertainment Extravaganza takes place from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the grounds of City Hall on Pacific Street.

The entertainment line-up, in order of appearance, features the Monterey Community Band, the Garage Band, Santa Cruz Steel, Torch 'N The Bones, The Satin Dolls, RST, the Greg Morrison Band and The Cannery Row Boys. For the kids' entertainment, the celebration offers stilt-walkers, magicians, and face painters.

The festivities resume again at 9:15 p.m., with fireworks over Monterey Bay. The fireworks will be accompanied by a live broadcast of patriotic music on KWAV 97 FM.

Bosnian CHS student wins prestigious arts honor

By DELIN CORMENY

LAST YEAR, 17-year-old Damir Polic spent his summer dodging snipers and bombs in his hometown of Sarejevo. This summer, he'll be painting portraits in the quiet hills of Valencia, California.

The Carmel High School junior recently won a scholarship to attend the California State Summer School for the Arts (CSSSA), which takes only "the cream of the crop of art students in the state," according to Susan Swanson of the Cultural Council for Monterey County.

Polic has been studying in Carmel since last October, after getting involved with the Bosnian Student Program. He said the quality of education has suffered since the outbreak of civil war in the former Yugoslavia, and the program places students overseas so they can finish their studies.

"You are going to school and the shelling starts, so you don't go to school for weeks," he said. "Then you don't have windows or there are a few holes on the roofs. Or on the way to school, there are snipers shooting at you. What's funny is it's normal."

Polic said he plans to remain in Carmel until he finishes high school.

"He doesn't have much to go home to," commented Bob Rice, Polic's host father. "His parents are in Zagreb [Croatia] and his sister is now in

New literary magazine aims to define terms common to humanity

By KATHRYN GUALTIERI

AN ARRESTING, but melancholy photograph by David Williams III on the cover of the first issue of a new literary magazine called Vox, published by Pacific Grove resident Mel Edelman, sets the stage for the central theme that wends through, and binds all of its fictional short stories, non-fiction articles, and poems.

The photo depicts a very old man, with long, straight, white hair and a full beard, whose wrinkled hands shield his eyes, as if he were afraid to look at the changing world around him.

Review

In late 1994, Edelman gathered together a number of unpublished works by 10 friends and acquaintances, and Vox was born. He encouraged these writers and artists to relate their own experiences on how life's changes had affected them personally in physical, mental, and spiritual ways.

On Vox's inside cover, Tom Donald's poem entitled "Change of Course" outlines the literary adventure that awaits the reader:

*What is the course of change?
What does it sound like? How does change move?
How do we move toward and with change?*

After describing examples of "observed" change,

"conservative" change, "determined" change, and "uncontrolled" change. Donald concludes:

Whiz guitarist Bruce Forman takes challenge — solo jazz sets right here in Carmel SAY WHAT you like — it's a world of wonderfully witty twists and turns. Clint Eastwood loves jazz, and became a movie icon by playing unforgiving gunslingers.

At the same time, brilliant jazz guitarist Bruce Forman looks like a gunslinger out of sound stage Westerns — tall, slender, lean of jaw, intense. Hair somewhat long. Hands that couldn't be faster.

Both men write beautiful ballads. But here's what fires up my brainpan today: Forman exercised Clint-type grit and Cary-Cooper-at-high-noon courage when he took the proposed terms of Friday night's local appearance.

Place: that Jazz Store, right beside KRML Radio over in The Crossroads. Bruce will kick off his first solo set at 7:30.

You got it right. Solo.

Duo gigs are fairly bare bones, players putting their skills on the line without the usual insurance.

In defense of books on the 'to be banned' list

WE HEARD a snippet of news on the radio the other day. We didn't catch the beginning. But we heard something about an African-American group demanding that Huckleberry Finn be removed from the curriculum of their local school. We didn't hear where this happened.

We wanted to know more. We wanted to go to the board meeting. We know! We know! They don't like outside agitators! But this board of education needs one. Somebody should represent Mark Twain, and we thought we should do it.

How sad to object to a book for a single word! We know the word "nigger" is extremely offensive to all who care about equality, but this offensive word is said by offensive men in offensive times.

Huck only uses the word because he knows no other. Surely no African-American could find either Huck's attitude or Mr. Twain's message offensive... could they?

Attack on us all

We've attended the National Racial Coalition-Building Institute (NCRBI) on cultural diversity. Their workshops are wonderful. They teach that an attack on any one of us, or any group, is an attack on the human dignity of us all. They teach us to be allies.

But Huck and Jim went further than the NRCBI. They were not just allies; they were friends, became almost father and son, and in the end, the source of both their lives' meaning.

In a soul-searching moment, Huck breaks out of the narrow-minded racism of his time to help Jim escape. His upbringing leads him to believe he will go to hell for this.

"All right, then, I'll go to hell," he tells himself, delivering the final judgment of his society for his love of Jim.

"You don't know about me without you have read a book by the name of The Adventures of Tom Sawyer, but that ain't no matter. That book was made by Mr. Mark Twain and he told the truth, mainly. There was things which he stretched, but mainly he told the truth."

Significant book

Mark Twain lets Huck assure us the book is true. The theme of man's inhumanity to African Americans made this book so controversial that librarians initially refused to put it on their shelves. This was the first book that aligned me forever to the black man's struggle for justice.

In addition to the book's theme, who could deprive Americans of their favorite, freckle-faced symbol? My father, when he was 25, took himself down the Mississippi because the spirit of Huck was still alive in the man.

In the teaching of history or literature, if we ban or throw out any element of our past that we now find offensive, how are we to know where we are — and if we've made any progress?

Huckleberry Finn is part of the soul of America, representing the outlaw, the spirit of adventure. The Mississippi is like an artery in the hearts of America's young and not-so-young, calling out for freedom, distrusting authority, trusting your own mind and seeing with your own eyes.

Mark Twain is probably America's greatest writer to date.

Let's not deprive the next generation of Huck Finn. He's part of our roots. We cannot endure too many more assaults on our national treasures.

The "dumbing" of America has got to end!

Henry Miller's legacy remembered this week

■ Henry Miller Memorial Library presents several outdoor events

THE HENRY Miller Memorial Library, located on Highway 1 in Big Sur, has scheduled a variety of events for the weekend and Monday.

■ The Big Sur Music and Art Festival is slated from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday through Monday on the library's lawn. Items made by more than 50 Big Sur artists will be showcased. Admission is $1.

■ From 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday, an opening reception to accompany an exhibition of art by Big Sur artist Jay Whitehead is set. The exhibition will be on view through Aug. 16.

■ A dance party with Out of the Blue, the library's house band, will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. Saturday. Admission to the alcohol-free event is $5.

More information: 667-2574.

■ Coast Galleries present activities in conjunction with Miller exhibit

COAST GALLERIES of Big Sur presents a comprehensive exhibition of Miller's art and literary works — beginning Saturday at Casa Palmero, located on 17 Mile Drive between the first fairway and The Lodge at Pebble Beach.

In addition to 100 original watercolors, the exhibition will also unveil the "Centennial Collection" of 25 limited-edition prints, all of which bear Miller's original signature. The exhibit also contains rare lithographs and etchings, first edition books, vintage photographs of Miller and friends, and memorabilia from the Miller family estate.

The exhibition is open daily, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Casa Palmero, through Sept. 4. Further information may be obtained by calling 625-4145.

Into the Woods: Good performances, grim subject matter

By ROGER HENWEDGE and
JOAN DRUMMOND MILLER

INTO THE Woods is based upon traditional fairy tales, but this show is definitely not for children. The men who wrote this are not into happy endings, especially "happily ever after."

REVIEW

To this modern mix of Cinderella, Little Red Riding Hood and Jack and the Beanstalk, Stephen Sondheim brings his brooding music and muttering lyrics, and James Lapine brings psycho-babble, 20th century angst, and bromides.

Stir in Lapine's story of a Baker and his Wife who have been cursed into childlessness by an evil old Witch and what have you got? A mess, a stew, an omelette that doesn't come together.

In the fall of 1987 when Into the Woods first opened on Broadway, the reviews were lukewarm to negative. If it hadn't been for the reputations of Sondheim and Bernadette Peters, who starred in the show, it would probably have closed in a couple of weeks.

When these fairy tale characters go into the woods, they behave cruelly toward each other and become cynical.

There are a few funny lines. The Wolf sings to Red Riding Hood: "There's no possible way to describe what you feel: When you're talking to your meal."

Violent acts

But the smiles, even the cruel ones, are few and far between. In an act of revenge, Cinderella's bird friends peck out the eyes of her evil stepsisters. How low to encourage an audience to laugh at this violence!

The second act opens on more violence (most of the women are murdered) but the tone changes to sentimentality. One song pronounces that "no one is alone." Since the script makes a point that even a giant is a person, why do they all jump up and down with glee when they kill her? What kind of people are they?

The finale abounds with moralistic clichés. There's no wisdom here. An example:

*Into the woods — you have to grope,
But that's the way you learn to cope.*

*Into the woods to find there's hope
Of getting through the journey.*

Well done

About the performance: Leslie

In this scene from 'Into the Woods,' the Baker (Kevin Hanstick) shows Cinderella's golden slipper to The Mysterious Man (Mitchell Davis) and the Baker's Wife (Phyllis McChesney). The play runs through Aug. 6 at the Outdoor Forest Theatre in Carmel.

Williams makes a good witch in both her hideous form and in her sexy, cabaret persona. She can really belt out a number and is consistently entertaining to watch.

Kevin Cherep is a natural comedian with a great wolf costume, singing one of the only funny songs in the play. Phyllis McChesney is a standout as the Baker's Wife.

The other players give adequate performances although some were difficult to hear.

Choreography and direction are by Carol Benton who did her best with an almost unmanageable play.

Holly Goodwin's costumes are fanciful and amusing. Bill Riddle's orchestra brings clarity to the difficult score. Sondheim's music is, as usual, complex. "Children Will Listen" is the only melody you might be able to hum as you leave the theater.

The sets are a marvel. Three little houses on wheels roll on and off stage, there's a fanciful portable tower for Rapunzel, and what we get to see of the Giant's wife is a magnificent hand. The woods are designed so they blend up and into the real trees behind the theater itself. Congratulations to David Wagner, the set designer.

Excellent lighting by Dan Annereau adds to the magic.

The woods are enchanting — too bad the musical isn't.

'Into the Woods' plays Thursdays through Sundays at 8 p.m. Information: 626-1681.

Taste Buds

GIULIANO'S Elegant yet casual

IF YOU'RE in the mood for a cozy, casual Italian restaurant with a pretty dining room and an elegant feel, Giuliano's is right up your alley. Whether you desire a multi-course meal, just a glass of wine, or cappuccino and dessert, Giuliano's welcomes all comers.

Those familiar with Carmel may remember Giuliano's as a "fancy" restaurant where the waiters wore tuxedos and a pretentious air. Well, the restaurant has been sold and the atmosphere changed, according to chef and owner Christopher Caul.

"People still think of Giuliano's as 'that special occasion place,' and we don't want to be known for that," Caul said. "The first thing we did was take the waiters out of the tuxes. Now they wear white shirts and bright ties, so that you get a little of their own personality coming through."

CHEF CAUL

Caul hails from New York state, where he owned and operated restaurants in Fishkill and Cold Spring. He has also worked at Casanova restaurant in Carmel and at Giuliano's under its former owner.

He's been in the restaurant business since age 13. "I've never really done anything else," he said.

Caul put in a light-colored wood floor and recovered the benches and cushions in maroon fabric, so that the interior is light, open and airy. Wall lamps lined in pink fabric and pastel-colored ceramic vases of dried flower arrangements give the restaurant a soft, relaxed feel.

The revamped wine list now features a more affordable selection, including several local as well as Italian wineries. My friend and I sampled the tasty Vigneto Sortesele Trentino Pinot Grigio.

Diners at Giuliano's start their meals with what Caul terms a "taste from the chef" — a small complimentary appetizer that changes according to Caul's whim.

Our "taste" was a variety of olives marinated in extra virgin olive oil and fresh herbs, topped with Parmesan cheese. They were deliciously intense in flavor.

Pastas and ice creams are made fresh on the premises, and all meats, fish and game are grilled over mesquite.

Generosity

Wines are served in thin, gracefully-shaped glasses, and the bread basket is whisked away and refilled whenever empty. Ours was filled three times during the course of our meal.

Food comes to the table on warmed plates and portions are generous. We sampled a cream of tomato soup with basil pesto swirl as an appetizer, and it was large enough for two people to share. A confetti of basil, pepper flakes and Parmesan decorated the large bowl's rim.

We also tried the chanterelles mushroom ravioli appetizer special, served with a flavorful broth. It was delicious, as were the escargot, baked in a ramekin with tomato sauce and bread crumbs.

Nearly full, we shared a grilled vegetable plate, which came with a mild, sweet, soft polenta. The red and yellow bell peppers, zucchini, portabella mushrooms and eggplant were cooked to perfection, with a nice smoky flavor from the grill.

After our meal, we enjoyed cappuccinos and shared a tiramisu, served in a wine glass and topped with espresso sugar and a mint leaf. It was one of the best tiramisus we've ever tasted.

Giuliano's is moderately priced: appetizers range from $5 to $9; entrees $11 to $22, with a median price of $16-$17; and desserts are between $4 and $5. Wines are priced moderately as well.

It's all in keeping with Caul's philosophy — "You can spend a little or a lot. We like to leave that up to the customer."

Giuliano's, located at Mission and Fifth in Carmel, is open for dinner from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. Sunday through Thursday, open later Friday and Saturday. Information/reservations: 622-0650.

The cozy exterior of Giuliano's welcomes you indoors for fine food and wine.

THE WORLD I LOVE

The land I love is what my land can be,
A world united, race with ancient race,
Not a tense patchwork of geography
But one in knowledge, sharing strength and space.

When fear and hatred dim and let us learn
The awful lessons of our history,
To find the balanced justice we must earn
The land I love with teach us to be free.

And if we reach the stars, to slake our thirst,
Our endless questioning, we dare not fall;
Our puny quarrels must be forgotten first —
We go as one, or should not go at all.

Till we at last can take our rightful place
And know our limits are a past outworn,
This lovely earth, this planet-jewel in space,
This world I love is waiting to be born.

— Margaret Cavanaugh

ON THE FOURTH OF JULY

I wish you were here to share with me
the 4th of July as it used to be.

Firecrackers explode at dawn small crackles and pops.
The flag hangs off the deck, curls with the morning breeze.

We watch a parade,
then sit on the grass
while the band plays those old nostalgic tunes.

When evening comes,
a picnic on the beach.
Pull on warm jackets as darkness descends.

Watch rockets search for a place to bloom exotic flowers,
pictures in the sky.
We wait 'till the end,
a salute to the flag.

Homeward bound,
my head on your shoulder.

I still remember the warmth of the day.

— Dorothy M. Johnson

Second 'Walls Down' event celebrates human diversity

WALLS DOWN, a multicultural concert featuring several drummers and five dancers, is slated for 7 p.m. Saturday in the Monterey Room at the Monterey Fairgrounds, located at 2004 Fairgrounds Road in Monterey.

Susan Collins, a local artist who produces and directs the show, came up with the project as a way to present the diversity of the individual artists and at the same time, to show how we are all the same, no matter what our race or culture.

Walls Down is actually a trilogy of performances; the first took place last October, with flautist Ali Reyerson and four percussionists. The next show is set for early 1996.

The musicians played simultaneously, among 5' by 25' painted canvases that soared in random diagonals from floor to ceiling. Local kids were hosts and ushers.

Among the performers this Saturday are percussionist Babatunde, who has recorded with the likes of Stan Getz, Bruce Foreman, Van Morrison and Joe Henderson; jazz drummer John Goldsmith, who's played with Roland Kirk, Freddie Hubbard and Kenny Barron; and jazz and classical percussionist Greg Janusz, who was instrumental in helping to form Monterey County Symphony's In School Demonstration Program; Ikuyo Kanant, artistic director of the Watsonville Taiko Japanese drum troupe; and Nino Sanchez, a Flamenco percussionist from the Bay Area.

Among the dancers are flamenco artist La Romera, West African dancer Ecailama Gedo, Monterey Peninsula College jazz, tap and modern dance instructor Janet Butler, 17-year-old ballet dancer Sara Andrew, and pop/break/hip-hop dancers Ferron Suratos and Calvin Pitts of Fitch Middle School.

Tickets are $20 in advance, $22.50 at the door, $15 for students and seniors. Kids under 10 are admitted free.

MONTEREY BAY BLUES FESTIVAL 1995

A decade of good times, good tunes

Hats were the weekend's hot accessory. Walter Allen of Vallejo sported one as he enjoyed the Main Arena's musical offerings.

Musicians and audiences both enjoyed the annual Monterey Bay Blues Festival held last weekend at the Monterey County Fairgrounds. It was the festival's 10th year, and people were definitely in the mood to celebrate that fact. The sunny skies and warm weather didn't hurt, either.

Longtime KAZU radio programmer Kai Christensen smiles for the camera while those around him enjoy the music and the sun in the Main Arena.

Vocalist Barbara Morrison sang to a large crowd Saturday afternoon on Garden Stage 2.

Denise La Salle wowed the crowd with the power of her voice, her charismatic personality and her glittering dress during her Saturday afternoon arena set.

Guitarist Kenny Neal ventured offstage into the crowd with his guitar during his Saturday arena stint, and stopped to play especially for this little girl.

New jazz venue The Clubhouse announces lineup

And solo work's rarer than sentimental tax attorneys. Why did the no-nonsense notion strike positive chords within Forman at this time?

An answer came from Gil Wisdom, co-owner with Alan Schultz of both the store and jazz station: "We said it seemed like a great idea for an intimate, quiet room. We'd like to book more one-person 'high wire acts' simply because people love to hear an artist who's up there alone with himself or herself. Bruce thought about it one New York minute. Then he said he would 'enjoy the challenge.' Quite a gutsy musician."

Long involved with Monterey Jazz Festival as house band member and clinician for the young, Forman lives in San Francisco. He records significantly on the Kamei label — every new CD a journal of continued growth.

Reservations: 624-6431. Real special stuff.

Freedom sounds

Jazz always has been and always will be freedom music. It's fitting, then, that stylish jazz flutist Ali Ryerson will work with much-experienced pianist Smith Dobson in Carmel Valley during the Fourth of July holiday bash at Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

The venue's support group offers wine tasting and salmon barbecue, too. Proceeds from ticket sales will benefit Hidden Valley youth programs. Call 624-1475 or 659-3115.

■ The annual and boozeless Independence Day party on Monterey City Hall's grounds again will be a freebie. Musical units: Monterey Community Band, Garage Band, Santa Cruz Steel, Torch N' the Bones, Satin Dolls, RST, Greg Morrison Band, Cannery Row Boys.

Children will enjoy the stilt-walkers, magicians, face painters. Booths run by non-profits will include barbecue in more than a few varieties.

■ San Jose America Festival will run from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. on Independence Day. In Guadalupe River Park downtown. "Folk art, folklife villages, crafts, foods. And entertainment on three stages."

Event Director Bruce Labadie books San Jose Jazz Festival and jazz cruises as well. So listeners will hear quality acts — like Blues singer Sista Monica.

The Satin Dolls jazz trio is just one of the groups entertaining during the City of Monterey's annual Fourth of July bash.

Big Band? Right over here —

Jazz composer Bo Williams makes known a crisp fact: He has been named entertainment director at The Clubhouse (new Monterey venue at 638 Wave St.) by owner Vince LaRocca of Viva Enterprises.

Playing general host and MC, Bo also will conduct the 17-piece Monterey Jazz Orchestra (MJO) — not to be confused with the entirely separate Monterey Peninsula Jazz Orchestra — over there on Monday nights.

Bo's a real veteran on the big band scene. Guest bassist this Monday, he says, will be the Los Angeles session player Dave Marotta. A great Monterey clan, as you likely realize, carries that name.

MJO regulars include many of this region's top drawer jazzmen: Ron Coolidge, Brian Stock, Roger Eddy, Tom Politzer, Doug Rowan, Dasher (David Kempton), Bill Vallaire, Nat Sherman.

Williams pledges "live jazz every evening" except Thursdays and Sundays — "set aside for comedy." Call 372-7200.

Monterey Bay Blues Fest '95

Last weekend's bash at the fairgrounds recalled two pro baseball players.

The main stage roster was outfielder Enos Slaughter of the old St. Louis Cardinals: steady, tough, worth watching, occasionally superb (guitarist Coco Montoya). The two Garden Stage line-ups were Reggie Jackson. Anything might happen, from ho-hum to unqualified brilliance.

Fest trustee Gus Lewis staggered the Garden Stage (GS) set times beautifully; one could catch chunks of not-quite-concurrent acts. "In our 10th year," Gus said, "we have won a core audience. That lets us take some chances and go talent scouting."

Sunday's merciless heat sent some arena fans home early, while GS crowds could catch the breezes across grassy, tree-shaded areas and boogie down. Fest management said the "preliminary total" was 35,000 paid (arena and grounds) admissions. GS highlights:

■ Blues diva Sista Monica and her band were no less than compelling. On one dirge for man-trashed love — "Pussy Cat Moon" — Monica Parker from Santa Cruz transcended technique and material. She hit her zone, and became the complete, truthful artist. It's always an honor when one witnesses such moments. Keyboard adept Danny Beconcini contributed mightily.

■ Behind Monica and with his own group, London-based harmonica master Johnny Mars tore down the house. He achieves the unsettling quality of masters playing the frankest urban blues. Whenever the chance comes to see Monica and Mars work together, grab it.

■ Local guys Red Beans & Rice. There's a quality about guitarist Gil Rubio — call it cleanliness of heart — that permeates this band. Check out their first CD.

■ San Jose vocalist Taylor P. Collins had her band play some solo breaks "for the jazz fans." Trumpeter Jeff Lewis sounded like the mid-career Dizzy Gillespie. Swinging flutist Diana Tucker said she fronts her own jazz unit in that city.

■ Little Jimmy King (seasoned Memphis guitarist and singer) made fans stamp and roar. He celebrated the spirits of both Willie Dixon and Jimi Hendrix — with a gritty, fine horn section working out behind.

■ Gus Lewis heard and brought in the Joyful Gospel Singers of New Orleans — Jackie Tolbert (power plus), Michael Veal (soulful tenor), Yolanda Beavers (classic Sanctified Church soprano). Propelled by a Crescent City backbeat and strictly traditional material, they filled the Sunday morning grove with wondrous energies.

The crowd loved them, and joined in call/response segments from the second tune on. Stage manager Ron Daniels estimated that 1,200 souls got involved in the long set, scores marching about to an old-timey anthem, waving white handkerchiefs. The real soul food.

This extraordinary vocal trio has CDs out. You can ask for them on the independent Jamalar label.

(It was good to see old pal Ron back from virus-caused heart problems. He and his fetching wife, Pam, shared the traffic director chores — while deejay Buddy Lowe of KRML Radio was a beaming MC.)

Peachwoods party

It's a bar and grill in Santa Cruz — Peachwoods. And Saturday through Monday, it will be vibrating with the Dixie Jazz and Blues Blast. Coordinator: Watsonville's ambitious Society for the Preservation of Ragtime.

The announced lineup: Preservation Hall Jazz Band ("Monday only"), Toots Sweet, Dirty Butter Blues Band, Frank Leal and Ree Brunell, Dennis and The Sharks, Silicon Culch, Robin Anderson Big Band, Elby Coy's Big Band, Moss Landing Regulars, Fog City Stompers, on and on.

Peachwoods says: "Dennis Patterson will field questions about scheduling and badge prices." Call 426-6333.

Paintings by Edward Norton Ward (above: an example), three-time president of the Carmel Art Association, go on view Saturday.

Collector's Gallery opens Edward Norton Ward show

AN EXHIBITION of paintings by current Carmel Art Association President Edward Norton Ward opens with a reception from 5 to 9 p.m. Saturday at Collector's Gallery, located on Dolores and Sixth in Carmel.

Ward paints and travels throughout the American West and Southwest. Aside from his membership in the Carmel Art Association (since 1963), Ward is a charter member of the Society of American Impressionists and a Charles Russell Rider Artist (a lifetime member).

Ward's work is on view through July 16. More information: 622-0776.

Pacific Grove Art Center opens year's largest exhibit

THE PACIFIC Grove Art Center's new show, Arrangements — The Art of the Still Life, opens with a public reception for the artists from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday at the center, located at 568 Lighthouse Ave. in Pacific Grove.

The exhibition, PGAC's biggest show of the year, features a variety of subjects of still life by both American and European artists from the late 19th through the mid-20th century.

The paintings for the still life exhibition are on loan from the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, Trotter Galleries, Karges Fine Art, Trotter Antiques, Hawk Fine Arts and many private collections.

The show will remain on display through Aug. 5. More information: 375-2208.

Paul Mays' 'Music, Food & Drink' is just one of many art pieces in Pacific Grove Art Center's new show, 'Arrangements — The Art of the Still Life,' which opens with a public reception from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday.

Tom Millea's photography evokes feelings in viewers

■ An exhibition of his prints opens tonight in the Fireside Gallery at Highlands Inn.

By SUE BARTON

LOCAL PHOTOGRAPHER
Thomas Millea will show 35 photographs of his limited edition platinum and IRIS prints, beginning with a reception from 5:30 to 7:30 tonight in the Fireside Lobby Gallery of the Highlands Inn, Carmel. The title of the exhibit is Fragments From an Uncommon World.

That's the basic information you need to get there. What you will experience at the event is far from basic. The images are complex and very beautiful and you will feel something when you look at them.

For example, the torso of a pregnant woman has been captured in such a way as to evoke a particular response. What that response is will vary depending on the individual viewing the work, but it is an image burnished to such a degree of intensity by Millea's use of light, it seems to emit heat. It is the virtual essence of fertility.

Senses are involved

The black head-covering of a woman in one of the IRIS prints has such uncommon depth you want to plunge your fingers into the frame to feel the fabric. If that were possible, your hand would come back smudged with soot.

In another piece, El Capitan at Yosemite (where Millea was artist-in-residence over a period of three years,) is seen at a distance. What makes the photograph unique is that the huge stone is seen hazily yet distinctly, as if through glass imprinted with crisp black trees and plants. It is multi-layered and on one level, the effect is that of a 1920s Japanese block print.

It is not a surprise to read in Millea's biographical material that his work has been included in shows at the New York and San Francisco Museums of Modern Art. It's also been seen in two galleries in Japan, the Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris, the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, and in Germany.

It can still be seen in museum collections in New Zealand, Australia, Stanford and Princeton Universities. More locally, Millea's photos are contained in the Winfield and Ansel Adams galleries in Carmel, where Millea has lived for 22 years.

EXHIBITION
PREVIEW

Tom Millea's limited-edition platinum and IRIS prints can be seen beginning with a reception tonight at Highlands Inn in Carmel Highlands.

The Highlands Inn show has been curated to be just as titled; it is all fragments — a face here, a cloud there, a detail of a room in the Louvre which is not like any room, anywhere.

But don't take someone else's word for this. See it yourself. The show hangs through Sept. 15.

'Pastures of Heaven' danced emotional map

THOSE FAMILIAR with John Steinbeck's lyrical collection of short stories titled Pastures of Heaven, know that they were written in the area where Corral de Tierra Country Club is located. The mountains drop down sharply into pastures. As you gaze out of the huge windows of the club, you catch your breath at the magnificent sight.

It was an excellent site for the American Diabetes Association (ADA) to hold its "Pastures of Heaven" silent and live auction and dinner last Saturday. Excellent because love is like the pastures; it has its highs and its lows. This is what guests talked about during the evening — loved ones — parents, brothers, children and grandparents all who "suddenly" found they were victims of diabetes.

But it was not until Honorary Chairs Alan and Sandra Silvestri related how the gripping tale of the disease made itself known to us. Alan Silvestri, who wrote the musical sound track to Academy Award-winning Forrest Gump, told the audience that his wife had just finished a "Diabetes World Tour," and then he invited her to speak.

The room became quieter and quieter as Sandra told us that her five-year-old son, Joey, had been diagnosed with Type I diabetes two-and-a-half-years ago. Because he got diabetes when he was very young, the likelihood that he will suffer some, if not most, of the potentially fatal consequences in his early adulthood is very high.

She mentioned visiting Denver, Philadelphia and Atlanta, where the warmth and love shown to her by all the chapters was overwhelming.

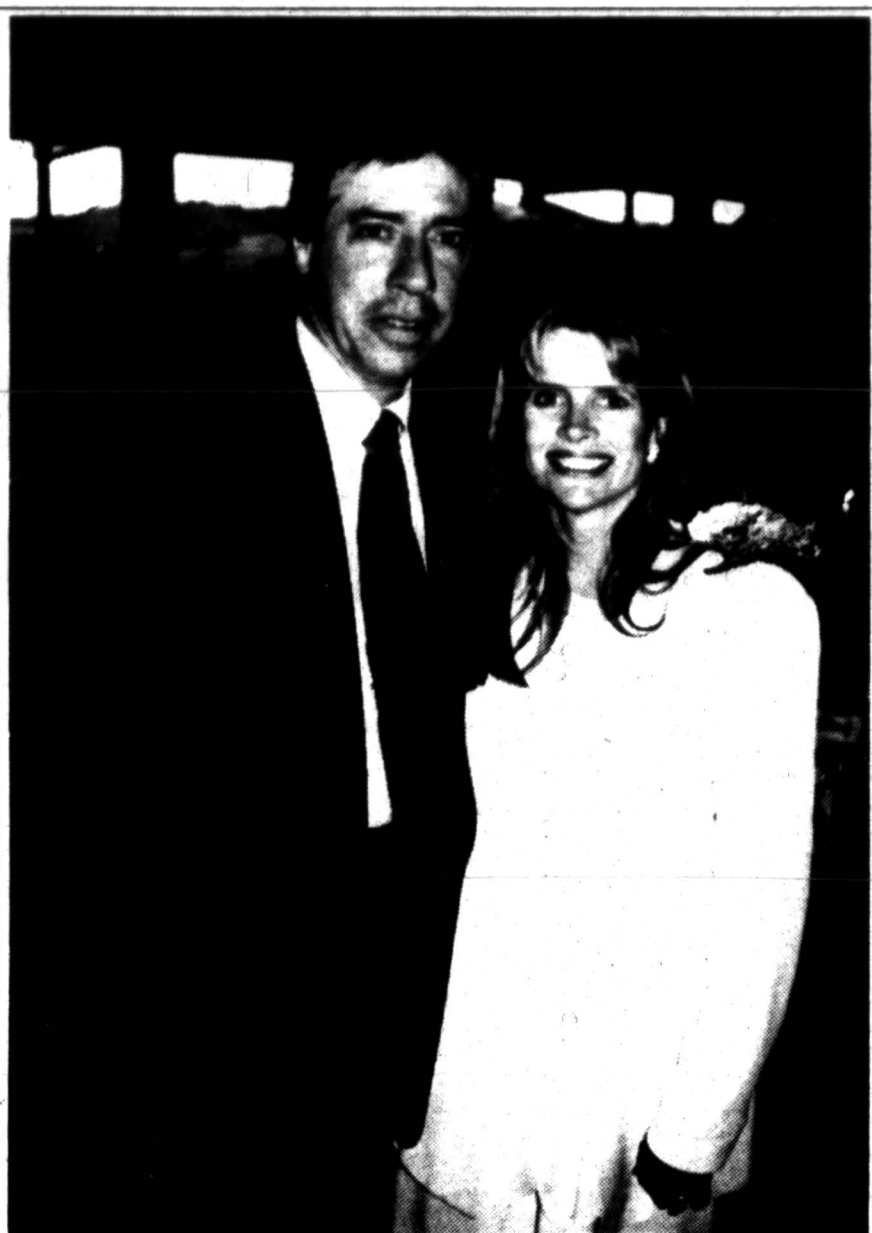

Then she spoke to two gentlemen in Atlanta who told her the media doesn't care about diabetes anymore, saying, "It's no longer of any interest to the public. 'You mean,' she answered them, 'there is something more interesting than life?'" She told the riveted crowd that diabetes kills five times as many people as AIDS. The greatest fear for parents is that their child could slip into a diabetic coma during sleeping hours.

However, the courage, hope and belief that there will be a cure soon is what came across at the end of her speech, and she took her seat to a resounding applause.

ADA Peninsula chair Don Maxcy told us that his son died from diabetes at the age of 14 during the 1970s, and it is only recently that he has come to grips with his loss.

The event featured a silent auction; a delicious salmon dinner at tables decorated with lovely wild flowers and miniature hay stacks, done by Adele O'Grady, one of the "Angel" sponsors listed on the program; and a dynamic live auction with auctioneers Pete DeVries, Les Boswell and Jeff De Vries.

Honorary chairs Alan and Sandra Silvestri were the lead speakers at 'Pastures of Heaven,' the American Diabetes Association's benefit dinner held Saturday at Corral de Tierra Country Club. Their 5-year-old son has diabetes. Alan wrote the musical sound track for the Academy Award-winning motion picture, Forrest Gump.

Alan Silvestri, was a huge autographed and framed Forrest Gump poster, autographed video and a box of chocolates. It went for $675. Artie Early donated dinner for eight at her lovely home that went for $1,100.

The evening ended with lessons in the "Cowgirl Twist" and dancing until midnight.

■ One foundation not to take for 'granted'

All Saints' Episcopal Day School, Ariel Productions, Carmel Bach Festival, Carmel Music Society, Chartwell School and Elkhorn Slough were but a few of the recipients.

It was a glorious day outside as well as inside last Thursday when the Pebble Beach Co. Foundation Board of Directors, at a luncheon hosted at The Inn at Spanish Bay, announced the issuance of 27 grants totaling $54,500.

Mark Verbonich, vice president of community affairs for the Pebble Beach Co., served as host and welcomed honored guests, including representatives of the Lone Cypress Co., which owns the Pebble Beach Co. New Foundation members, Jack Holt and Mary Kay Higgins, were then introduced to the audience, which was treated to a swordfish steak luncheon.

In addition to the aforementioned beneficiaries, the Foundation also fulfilled the second year of a five-year $50,000 pledge to the Monterey Bay Aquarium Aviary Exhibit with a $10,000 grant. Also, a $10,000 grant was given to Flood Relief 1995, which the Foundation had pledged during the recent telethon held in Monterey.

Additionally, four annual scholarships totaling $6,000 for children of Pebble Beach Co. employees were given to Liberty Nacional, Deanna Sousa, Topui Fonua and Mary Hidajat.

The Foundation should be commended for its philanthropic endeavors on the peninsula. Just witnessing the smiles on the faces of all the recipients makes attending this annual event so worthwhile.

■ A red-hot time at Red Cross gathering

Now hear this! This place is open 365 days a year, 24 hours a day, nights, weekends, etc. It's the American Red Cross, Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter, founded in 1916, and still growing!

They held their annual Recognition and Awards Banquet Barbecue at Los Laureles Lodge last Saturday, and virtually everyone present and many who were unable to attend, received some sort of recognition.

But how do you thank people like Phyllis Crockett for 51 years of volunteering? At present she is in training in Health Services with 30 others from all over the state. Jean Snow has been with the Red Cross since "....I was a kid," she told us with a modest smile. And, Jean will tell you herself that she's no kid.

How they thanked Jean, who was decked out in a World War II Red Cross uniform, was to give her special recognition in honor of her service overseas during that war.

Patricia Steele received a citation for exceptional volunteer service for 1994, and Tina DeSilva received a certificate of recognition for extraordinary personal action. DeSilva helped out before medics arrived on the scene to save a person who was choking.

Outgoing Chairman Constantine "Connie" Ash welcomed everyone and told about the accomplishments of the Carmel Chapter last year. He received a plaque from Eleanor Laiolo for his wonderful service to the Red Cross from 1988 to the present.

It was good to see Louis LaBarbara, "Iya" Ozden, Dolores Charron and Bill Verver among the many who came out in the 105-degree heat to support the Red Cross.

■ Do you 'Wanna Pet?'

It was a SPCA high-noon picnic barbecue at the Carmel Valley River Ranch last Sunday with more than 100 animal lovers attending. Cowhands and cowgirls, many with the green SPCA neckerchiefs were on hand to enjoy colorful salads, beans, slices of beef, and ice cream topped with strawberries... a perfectly palatable menu.

Some of the volunteers wearing "Wanna Pet?" aprons doubled in helping others in the food line. Volunteers included Jane Roland, Anne-Lise Whitt, Marge Chaney and Jeanne Leonard. Among those greeting guests were Shane Fuller, Lynn Phalan-Dahman, SPCA executive director, and host Will Shaw with Susan Osborne.

Remember, the SPCA does not receive any of its funds from federal, state, county or local governments. It is completely dependent on donations from all of us. So give them a call. They want and need your help.

'Vox' magazine theme explores how change affects human mind, spirit

So many dances.
So many approaches to change.
So many choices.

Vox (the Latin word for "voice") currently can be found in a selected number of area bookshops — a fact that is long overdue, according to Edelman.

"My literary project has taken five years to complete," he revealed in a recent interview with The Pine Cone.

He acknowledged that, by selecting "Change" as the single topic for his first issue, he has focused on one of life's most disquieting themes. Some of his readers have suggested to him that future editions contain "more levity." But as Edelman is quick to note, one's ideas and work reflect where the artist is at a particular stage in life.

Everyone has a story

The magazine's contributors come from very diverse fields of expertise: computer expert, building contractor, gardener, retired ship's captain, not to mention a prominent local radio personality and two artists. Many literary critics would probably not consider such backgrounds suitable for "serious" writing.

However, publisher Edelman maintains that one needn't be a professional writer, poet, artist or illustrator in order to have something important to say. "There is at least one good story in each of us," he said.

And he should know. After college, Edelman was employed for a time at a New England book factory before migrating West and adopting his current vocation — construction. That prior experience formed the basis for his own piece in Vox called "Untitled Fragment," a story about a man's passionate love affair with books.

His central character marvels "that he worked in a factory where hundreds of tons of noisy machinery, capable of cutting off a man's finger in an instant, could also create an object as fine as a book."

In another of Vox's entries entitled "Here One Prays for Everything," author Susan Dorf, also an artist, writes about a troubled American woman searching for answers to the causes of her divorce, while spending time in a Central American country. Dorf's "word paintings" of her heroine's fantasies in a foreign culture aptly convey the dilemma of an unhappy individual, desperately trying to accept unwanted change.

In a touching autobiographical essay, "The Day My Life Changed Forever," artist Peggy Olson shows us her adaptive tactics for surviving malignant breast cancer. She progresses from feelings of hopelessness to coming to terms with the ultimate outcome.

On a lighter yet serious note, computer expert Andy Karp, in "Facing the Music," tells how the unfulfilled life expectations and hidden dreams of two longtime friends are finally communicated and understood one New Year's Eve.

Handsome black-and-white illustrations and photographs are interspersed throughout Vox to enliven the text. Phil Wellman, of Wellman Advertising and Design in Carmel, provided Edelman with an accomplished layout for the magazine's first issue.

A free-lance journalist who has written numerous travel pieces and interviews for local periodicals and newspapers, Edelman believes that having a strong focus for his magazine will bring both writers and readers to a better understanding of man's ideas and relationships.

The idea of a "theme" approach for subsequent editions of Vox is important to Edelman. He has already chosen the topics of "fear" and "synchronicity" for upcoming editions.

Money is always the element that determines the survival of literary magazines. The next issue most likely will contain selective advertising (the current issue has no ads) and may require private grants.

His endeavor is well worth supporting. Vox sells for $5 per copy at Pilgrim's Way, Thunderbird Bookshop, Monterey Coffeehouse Bookshop and Bay Books in Monterey, and Bookworks in Pacific Grove.

Some simple approaches to home water conservation

"WATER, WATER everywhere, nor any drop to drink" reads the line from Samuel Taylor Coleridge's The Rime of the Ancient Mariner, written in 1798.

In 1995, however, this may be more fact than fiction. Environmentalists estimate that each of us uses more 100 gallons of water each morning in our daily routine. And that is just in the morning.

Include the amount of water you use during the rest of the day (approximately 70 gallons), and that adds up to 1,190 gallons of water a week, 3,570 a month and 42,840 a year. Multiply this by millions of people across the country every day and the figure is mind-boggling.

Water is essential to our lives, but it is imperative that we learn how to conserve and recycle. And the home is the easiest place to begin. The following are tips on home water conservation:

- Begin conservation efforts in the bathroom —

Market Update: Slow rebound

THE MONTEREY Peninsula real estate market rebounded somewhat in May, primarily due to a substantial increase in sales in Monterey.

The real estate market in Carmel, Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach, Monterey and Pacific Grove, taken as a whole, surged 47 percent compared to the level achieved in April of this year, but was 12 percent lower than in May 1994, as measured by closed sales.

Just as we all were waiting for spring to finally arrive, May sales improved, signaling some hope for the summer. Monterey sales led the way, while sales in other areas approximated or were lower than last month's and last year's sales levels.

The median price in Carmel Valley increased 2 percent. Monterey and Pebble Beach median prices were unchanged. Carmel's median price decreased 2 percent and Pacific Grove 1 percent. (Median prices in the areas indicated are usually based on a relatively small number of sales — a situation in which only one more sale above or below the previous median price would change the median price significantly.)

The rise in mortgage interest rates, which began a year ago, has moderated significantly in recent weeks, and there are indications that lower interest rates are possible later this summer. The recent hot weather, which followed the disastrous winter and the unseasonably cool spring, has encouraged potential buyers to get out and go house-hunting.

Many area Realtors, escrow officers and lenders have revealed that this market uptick has continued into June due to attractive home prices and financing options.

the place where we consume the most. A shower uses up to four gallons of water per minute and brushing your teeth can take 10 gallons. Even a leaky faucet can lose 50 to 100 gallons of water a day.

■ Take shorter showers and install a water-saving shower head (no more than 2.5 gallons per minute) to save both water and energy used for heating water.

The cost will pay for itself in one to three months. Water-saving devices also are available for other faucets. Flow-control aerators, designed to fit faucets with threaded or unthreaded spouts, are the simplest to install and can reduce flow rates from 4 gallons per minute to as low as half a gallon per minute.

■ Practice other water-saving measures, such as turning off the water when shaving or brushing your teeth, adjusting water temperature by turning down the cold instead of turning up the hot, washing your hands in a basin instead of under running water, and fixing all leaky faucets.

While these steps will make a great difference, the biggest bathroom water waster is the toilet. One-fourth of all domestic water consumed is flushed down the commode (5 to 7 gallons per flush). You can greatly reduce this amount by placing a water displacer in the bottom of the tank. A water displacer can be something as simple as a ceramic brick.

Test your tank with different-sized displacers to determine how much water is required to efficiently flush waste. Most tanks will flush with one-half to one-quarter less than the tank holds. If you need to replace your toilet, install a low-flush model, which reduces the water used by 60 to 90 percent.

Now...on to the kitchen. Many of the water-saving techniques used in the bathroom can be applied here.

■ Use aerators on the faucets, check for leaks, and avoid letting water run for any purpose.

■ When washing dishes, hand-wash small loads instead of using a dishwasher. Filling the basins for washing and rinsing will save four to six gallons per load. If you use a dishwasher, operate it fully loaded and use the energy-saving cycle, if available.

Other areas of your home that should be targeted for conservation include your laundry room and garden. Adjust the water level in washing machines according to the load size. Avoid washing just a single item or two and use low phosphate or phosphate-free cleaning products.

Phosphates are one of the greatest contributors to the decline of water quality and have been banned in many parts of the country. If it is time to buy a new washing machine, buy a front-loading model. It will use up to 40 percent less water than a comparable top-loading model.

When washing your car, attach a spray gun or nozzle to the hose. A continually flowing hose uses five to eight gallons of water per minute. At that rate, you could easily go through 120 gallons of water to wash one car. Most cars can be washed with 10 to 15 gallons of water. Similarly, do not use running water to "sweep" your sidewalk and driveway.

If you garden or keep an attractive lawn, use water wisely. Watering should be done early in the morning or after the sun has set to avoid loss from evaporation. Sprinklers waste water through evaporation. Instead, a slow drip can waste from 15 to 40 gallons a day.

Water is our most precious resource. Some of these water-saving suggestions are more convenient than others, but water is one resource we cannot take for granted. Our homes are the easiest place to begin making a difference. Saving our water is an effort toward saving our planet, especially as we begin to decide whether to build a larger dam on the Carmel River or to consider other water resource projects.

Cost, complexity of purchase hurting housing market

Buyers forced to pay for lawyers, CPAs, building inspectors

IN THE late 1980s when the average California home was inflating an estimated $100 a day, the cost of buying and selling a home was not as important to the average home buyer and seller. Real estate broker fees, lender charges and other costs seemed negligible when home sellers reaped extravagant gains.

But today, real estate experts worry that the cost and complexity of the transaction is something that more and more home buyers and sellers are beginning to worry about. And they're all too aware the trend may be helping to keep home sales at depressed levels.

Selling a home can eat up 10 percent or more of the sales price, which can amount to a big chunk of the homeowner's equity, discouraging a potential buyer from selling one house to buy another.

On top of the standard real estate sales commissions, mortgage costs and closing charges, buyers and sellers pay for many more inspections, warranties and repairs resulting from disclosures than they did just a few years ago.

Ironically, the very laws that were crafted to protect the consumer from deceitful home sellers, environmental risks and shady real estate operators has helped make the typical home sale more expensive and confusing.

California Trends

By BRADLEY INMAN

Today, the average home purchase involves signing a pile of legal forms, scrutinizing a slew of disclaimers and sorting through a myriad of inspection reports and disclosure statements.

Take Robert De Heer's Professional Publishing Standard Forms book, which in the early 1960s had a handful of real estate forms. Today, the 354-page book is packed with more than 120 real estate-related forms. There are 10 different forms for disclosing the condition of the property and nine different forms on exactly who the real estate agent does and does not represent.

With all of the new real estate laws on the books, these forms have become very confusing, compelling some buyers and sellers to pay for expert advice from lawyers, accountants and building inspectors.

Take the California Association of Realtors' eight-page purchase contract form. One clause reads:

"If Buyer or Seller provides written notice of cancellation pursuant to rights duly exercised under Paragraph 1A, 11, 3, 7, 9, 11, 12, 15, 21, 25, 26, 27, or 30, the

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA CITY COUNCIL NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING SOURCE REDUCTION AND RECYCLING ELEMENT

City Council
Public Hearing
August 1, 1995
3:30 p.m.
City Hall Council Chambers

Assembly Bill 939 requires all cities and counties in California to recycle 25 percent of their waste stream by 1995 and 50 percent by the year 2000. Monterey County and the City have prepared a summary plan to meet the goals of AB 939. To comply with the California Environmental Quality Act, Initial Studies and a Proposed Negative Declaration have been prepared for two the components of the Plan: the Source Reduction and Recycling Element (SRRE) and the Household Hazardous Waste Element (HHWE). These documents will be considered by the Planning Commission at its meeting of July 26, 1995, and the Commission will forward recommendations to the City Council for its consideration at the August 1, 1995, meeting.

In addition to the environmental documents, the Planning Commission will review the SRRE, HHWE, and the Non-Disposal Facility Element (NDFE). The NDFE does not require environmental review.

Copies of all documents are available to the public at the reference desk, Harrison Memorial Library, Ocean Avenue and Lincoln Street.

On August 1, 1995, the City Council will hold a public hearing on the proposed Negative Declaration for the SRRE and HHWE. It will also consider adoption of the SRRE, HHWE, and NDFE. The Public Hearing will be at 3:30 p.m., or shortly thereafter, in the City Hall Council Chambers located on the east side of Monte Verde between Ocean and Seventh Avenues.

Questions should be addressed to Jim Cullen, Public Works Director, at (408) 624-3543.

All members of the public are invited to attend.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Close to town, yes, but oh so much more

YOU CAN walk to the beach or stroll to town from this elegant Carmel home, but there's more than mere convenience that makes this house stand out.

For starters, there's a stucco wall that borders much of the home, offering optimum privacy. Then there's four large bedrooms and four full bathrooms.

There's a large unit on the lower level that is ideal for your guests. They'll truly feel like they're on vacation, and you won't even know they're around.

There's also a sunroom with spectacular ocean views. And if you're looking to entertain, the private garden and patio (pictured above) are yours to enjoy.

■ Price: $1,595,000.

Complexity of transactions hurting market

deposits, less costs and fees, as applicable, shall be returned to Buyer."

Many of these requirements have made things like home inspections and home warranty insurance a routine part of every real estate sale — all of which come with a cost. Moreover, buyers and sellers are being urged to pay for special inspections for such items as the condition of the roof, the air quality and the home's seismic fortitude. There's a rationale for everything but it also has made home buying an overwhelming and expensive experience for the average consumer.

Commissions top list

The real estate commission is still the most expensive cost when a home is sold.

Legally, real estate commissions are negotiable. However, a 1991 Consumer Federation of America survey of 500 real estate agents found that in California's three largest metropolitan markets — Los Angeles, San Francisco and San Diego — a 6 percent commission was being charged by the vast majority of those surveyed.

Real estate agents argue that they are not being enriched by these commissions, and that they must do more work, because of all of the new rules, to close a transaction.

Indeed, many real estate companies in the state are struggling to stay afloat. Nevertheless, this is one home selling expense that may be coming down.

Discount brokerage is becoming more popular as a raft of small independent real estate firms have popped up that promise commissions of 4 percent or lower.

For example, Oakland-based Realty Advocates has a menu of services from a $475 charge for access to the multiple listing service (MLS) to a full service 4.5 percent commission.

Even though the nation's largest real estate firms have generally shunned discount brokerage, some of their individual agents and brokers do advertise and promote discount commissions. For example, Century 21 Home Buying Center in Mission Viejo created a stir in Orange County when it began advertising a 3.5 percent commission rate.

Traditional brokers are reducing their fees in another but more quiet way. While they may set a fixed fee of 6 percent, buyers and sellers frequently ask agents, who often agree, to throw in part of their commission later on.

Despite these changes, consumers face an expensive and confusing challenge when buying a home.
